

- state, 1765, vi. 89; resigns his office on account of Rockingham's weak administration, 1766, 97; appointed first lord of the treasury in Chatham's ministry, 1766, 98; becomes the real minister during Chatham's illness, 101; agonized by "Junius" attacks, 112; divorced from his wife; marries the duchess of Bedford's niece, 115; resigns Jan. 28, 1770, 122; accuses Hillsborough of suppressing some of the council minutes, 126, 127; first lord of the treasury, Aug. 2, 1766 to Sept. 12, 1767; Dec. 1, 1767 to Feb. 1770, 140; resigns his office of privy seal, 1775, 180.
- Graham, general, wins the battle of Barrosa, 1811, vii. 317; captures San Sebastian, 351.
- Graham, sir James, first lord of the admiralty, 1830, viii. 67; helps to prepare the parliamentary reform bill, 70; resigns his office, 1834, 160; declines joining Peel's ministry in 1834, 170; his motion against the Queen's advisers, 275, 280; introduces his bill for regulating labour in factories; compelled to withdraw his education clauses, 336, 367; debate on the bill, 367, 368; ultimately passed, 368.
- Grammont, duke de, his conduct at Dettingen, 1743, v. 492; falls at Fontenoy, 1745, 495.
- Granada ceded to England, 1782, vi. 290.
- Granby, marquis of, second in command at Minden, 1759, vi. 44; commands the British in the campaign of 1761, 60; commander-in-chief; resigns, 1770, 121.
- Grand Alliance formed by William, v. 102.
- Grandval plans a design for assassinating William, iv. 565, 566; tried by court-martial; executed, 559.
- Grant, Charles, secretary for Ireland, vii. 552; joins the Wellington ministry, viii. 16; resigns, 1828, 25; president of the board of control, 67.
- Grant, R., moves for a regency, 1830, viii. 40; judge advocate general, 67.
- Grantham, lord, secretary of state, 1782, vi. 280, 603.
- Granville, earl. See Carteret.
- Grattan, Henry, champion of Irish liberty; his character, vi. 273; claims free trade and legislative independence as his country's right; supports the Roman Catholic relief bill, 273, 274; fails twice in carrying his declaration of rights, 275; congratulates Ireland in having acquired her freedom; repeal of statute of George I. asserting the dependence of Ireland, 277; national acknowledgment to, 277; speech on parliamentary reform, vii. 108; brings in a bill for repealing catholic disqualification, 109; states that he will not attend the House of Commons, 111; returned member for Wicklow, Jan. 1800; his orations against the Union, 123-126; duels with Mr. Corry, 124; his last speech in favour of Catholic emancipation, 485, 486; death of, May 14, 1820, 486.
- Graves, admiral, his encounter with de Grasse, 1781, vi. 251.
- Gray, his account of the trial of the rebel lords, 1746, v. 561, 562; his description of Westmoreland, vi. 329.
- Green, captain, prosecuted and executed for the supposed murder of captain Drummond, 1705, v. 178.
- Green, attacked by rioters, 1768; tried for murder; acquitted, vi. 104, 105.
- Greene, president of an American judicial court; refuses to release or exchange André, vi. 238.
- Greene, general, commands the American army in Washington's absence, vi. 236; defeated at Guilford, 1781; compels the Britishers to fall back, 249; defeated at Camden, 249.
- Greenwich Hospital, William determines to erect, iv. 594.
- Gregg, a clerk of Harley's; he is detected in a correspondence with the French secretary of state; he is tried, convicted, and executed, v. 203.
- Gregory, Pope, and the Anglo-Saxon slaves in Rome, Bede's story of, i. 79.
- Grenada captured by the British, 1763, vi. 66.
- Grenville, George, opposes Pitt's proposal to war with Spain, vi. 62; leader of the House of Commons, and treasurer of the navy, 64; opposes Pitt's German policy, 64; secretary of state, 71; first lord of the treasury; chancellor of the exchequer, 1763; his ministry, 72; moves that duties be laid on articles of American commerce; a stamp duty on paper, and others, 83; his stamp act is passed, 1765, 84; and rouses the American spirit, 85, 86; refuses to put the princess dowager's name in the Regency bill; the king contemplates dismissing him, 88; but is obliged to retain him, 89; defends his stamp act against Pitt's oratory, 91, 92; mobbed, 97; opposes Wilkes' expulsion from parliament; his emotion, 106, 107; his last speech in parliament; died Nov. 1770, 131; first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer, 1763-5; secretary of state, 1762, 140.
- Grenville, lady Hester. See Chatham, v. 590; vi. 62.
- Grenville, sir Richard, heroic conduct of, in a naval fight with the Spaniards, iii. 186.
- Grenville, Thomas, sent to negotiate with Franklin, 1782; returns from Paris,

- vi. 279, 280; negotiates at Vienna, 1794, vii. 47; first lord of the admiralty, 1807, 252; plans an expedition to the Dardanelles, 252; its failure, 254.
- Grenville, lord W. W., secretary of state; his correspondence with Chauvelin, vi. 523, 566, 567; remonstrates against the aggressive measures adopted by France, 554; brings forward a Reasonable Attempts bill, vii. 61; it is passed, 62; his hostile reply to Bonaparte's letter to the king, Jan. 1800, 141; opinion of statesmen on it, 142; his speech against Bonaparte, 143; succeeded as foreign secretary by lord Hawkesbury, 1801, 155; administration of Fox and, 1806, 229; they deliver up the seals of office, March 25, 1807, 246; retires to Dropmore, 576.
- Grey, Charles, earl, his efforts in favour of reform in the representation of the people, 1792, vi. 527; moves an address to the king to postpone the Irish Union, vii. 124; first lord of the admiralty, 1806, 229; his remarks on the negotiation with France, 237; advocates resistance against Napoleon, 246; Disenters' enlistment bill; the king opposes it, 247; applied to, to form a government, 1812, 322; foreign secretary, 1806, 640; his speech against lord Sidmouth's unconstitutional conduct in the case of trials for libel, 463, 464; his attacks upon Canning; he charges him with having pledged himself not to press the Catholic question, 614; approves of the ready recognition of the New Orleans French government by parliament, viii. 5; declares the necessity of reform in parliament, 61; formation of his ministry, 65, 66; principles of his government, 65; parliament on the defeat of his ministry on the reform question, 73, 79; his speech explanatory of the proposed reform bill, 1831, 84; his reply to the principal arguments against the bill, 86; resists the entreaties of his friends to obtain the passage of the reform bill by the creation of peers, 100; replies to lord Lyndhurst's speech, 101; upon the king refusing to create peers his ministry resigns, 103; Wellington failing to form an administration, he is recalled; obtains the king's consent to the creation of peers; power not exercised, 107; passing of the reform bills, 108; introduces the coercion bill for Ireland, which is passed, 1833, 131, 134, 135; defends the commission for inquiring into the state of the Irish church against unjust imputations, 161; overpowered by his feelings in telling the Lords of his resignation, 1834, 161; cause of his resignation, 162, 163; great banquet to, at Edinburgh, 165, 166.
- Grey, lady Jane, married to lord Guilford Dudley, proclaimed queen by Northumberland, June 10, 1553, ii. 575; conversation of, in prison respecting Northumberland's apostacy, 581; with her husband, lord Guilford Dudley, pleads guilty to the charge of high treason, 585; execution of both, and her remarkable fortitude, 593; memorial of, in the Beauchamp tower, 594.
- Griffiths, admiral, his accounts of the "La Vengeance" story, vii. 43.
- Grimaldi, marquis of; Spanish ambassador in France; signs the "Family compact," vi. 61.
- Grosley, his remarks on England and Londoners, vi. 310.
- Gross-Beeren, battle of, Aug. 23, 1813, vii. 348.
- Grote advocates the ballot principle, viii. 149; supports the poor law amendment bill, 156, 157; and the Irish church appropriation motion, 160.
- Grouchy appointed to watch Blücher at Waterloo, viii. 30.
- Grumbkow, general, sent on a mission to Charles of Sweden, to whom he gives an account of Marlborough, v. 198.
- Guadaloupe capitulated to the English, 1759, vi. 44.
- Guest, general, governor of Edinburgh castle, 1745; the young pretender prevents food from going in; the governor fires upon the town; the prince revokes his order, v. 515.
- Quickwar, a Mahratta chieftain, takes no part against the British, vii. 219.
- Guilds of trade, oppressions exercised by, i. 356.
- Guiscard, marquis de, his early career; employed as a French spy in England; has a meeting with the queen; he is arrested March 8, 1711, his correspondence with France having been detected; he is taken before the council, where he stabs Harley with a pen-knife; he is killed by the councillors, v. 246, 247.
- Guizot, M., opinion of, as to the application of the Britons for Roman aid against the Picts and Scots, i. 73; his remarks on Canning's foreign policy, vii. 593; joins in protesting against the royal decrees of 1830, viii. 47, 48; description of the meeting of Lafayette and the duke of Orleans; made minister of the interior, 2; at the head of the cabinet, 1832, 1836, 195; his official revelations respecting Louis Napoleon's enterprise, 196; his picture of English society, 229; appointed to keep a watch over prince Napoleon's movements, 263; his return to England; satisfied of the goodwill of the natives to France, 266; with Soult succeeds Thiers in the ministry, 269; describes the difficulties of Peel's position, 276; his description of a visit to Westminster Abbey with Macanlay, 312; his Spanish marriage plans, 417; his conduct vindicated, 419; resigns his post as minister, 421.

Gunpowder plot. See James I.
 Guntzburg, battle at, 1805, vii. 206.
 Gustavus III. of Sweden, succeeds Adolphus Frederic, 1771, vi. 600; agrees to subsidize an army to Spain, vi. 520; shot by Ankerstroem, March 6, 1792, 531.
 Guy, an M.P. and secretary to the treasury; sent to the Tower for being bribed, v. 14.
 Gwallior captured by the British, vi. 433; again occupied by them, viii. 361.
 Gwyn revives the idea of an academy of painting, vi. 367; his bridges, 382.
 Gyllenberg, count, the Swedish envoy in London; arrested for intriguing to raise a rebellion in England, v. 393.

H.

HABEAS Corpus act passed in 1679, iv. 251; suspended, 1689, iv. 475; 1695, v. 24; 1722, 418; 1794, vii. 35; 1800, 145; 1817, viii. 457; a second time in 1817, 463; the suspension repealed, 1818, 477.
 Hadrian visits Britain, A.D. 120, and builds Hadrian's wall, i. 41, 42; character of, by Gibbon, ib.
 Hague, congress at the, 1691, iv. 528, 530; treaty of the, May 21, 1659, v. 262; triple alliance of the, January 4, 1717, 264.
 Haileybury college, built by Wilkins, vii. 535.
 Halidon Hill, battle of, July 19, 1333, i. 502.
 Halifax, Charles Montague, earl of, forms part of William's new ministry in 1693; his eloquence, iv. 586; chancellor of the exchequer, v. 22; instrumental in establishing the standard of money, 1696, 36; first lord of the treasury, 1697, 40; impeached for advising a partition treaty, 97; loses his places in the privy council on Anne's accession, 1702, 113; votes an inquiry into the alleged danger of the Church, 170; patron of letters, 294, 295.
 Halifax, George Savile, earl of, parliament endeavours to find some charge against him, iv. 438.
 Halifax, earl of, secretary of state, 1763-1765, vi. 72, 140; proceedings against, for arresting Wilkes and Wood, 80.
 Hall, Robert, character of his preaching, vi. 513.
 Hallam Henry, character of his historical writings, viii. 314.
 Halle, treaty of, 1610, v. 261; taken by the Bavarians, 1809, vii. 290.
 Hamburg, peace of, May 22, 1762, vi. 601.
 Hamilton, duke of. See Long Parliament, and Cromwell, Oliver.
 Hamilton, lieutenant-colonel, his share in the Glencoe massacre, iv. 485;
 Hamilton, duke of, president of the Scottish convention of estates, iv. 485; alleged with others to have secreted soldiers in cellars and other places, 486; causes the convention doors to be locked, 488; authorized by William, in 1693, to investigate the massacre of Glencoe, but the duke dying, the inquiry was not proceeded with till 1695, 551.
 Hamilton, duke of; he disperses the Cameronians assembled to oppose the union, v. 194; killed in a duel with lord Mohun, 1712, 310.
 Hamilton, Gerard, his speech in favour of the subsidies, 1755; from which he is known as single speech Hamilton, v. 601.
 Hamilton, John, governor of Carlisle; surrenders to the duke of Cumberland, 1745, v. 544.
 Hamilton, lady, aids Nelson at Naples; recommended to the national gratitude, vii. 100.
 Hamilton, Richard, his baseness and treachery, iv. 475; his faithlessness causes the son of sir W. Temple, who had pledged to his being faithful, to drown himself in the Thames, iv. 475; placed at the head of troops for bringing the Ulster protestants to subjection, 477; succeeds Maumont as commander of James II.'s forces, 479; is superseded by Ross, 480; leads the Irish cavalry at the battle of the Boyne, is taken prisoner, 512.
 Hampden, John, refuses in 1636, to pay the illegal assessment of Ship Money, iii. 363; contests the right in the Exchequer Court, 364; difference of the judges, but ultimate decision against him, 364; increased importance of, after the trial, 365; sent as commissioner to attend the king on his visit to Scotland in 1641, 411; attempted to be seized by the king on Jan. 3, 1642, 427; is recalled when about to attack the royal army, 465; takes an active part in the siege of Reading, and urges Essex to attack Oxford, 471; and to concentrate his forces, 472; is wounded at Chalgrove Field, 473; dies June, 1643, 473; character of, described by Clarendon, 473, 474.
 Hampden clubs for parliamentary reform, vii. 451.
 Hanau, battle of, 1813, vii. 350.
 Hancock, John, proscribed by Gage, vi. 175.
 Handel, statue of, by Roubilliac, v. 346.
 Hanover, George, elector of. See George I.

Hanover, treaty of, September 3, 1725, v. 265, 425.
 Hansard and Stockdale, case of, viii. 258.
 Hanway, Jonas, his philanthropy; the first to use an umbrella in London, vi. 423.
 Harcourt, sir S., conducts Sacheverel's defence, 1710, v. 224; lord chancellor, 241; his motions at Oxford's trial, v. 395.
 Harcourt, colonel, commands the Madras army, vii. 220.
 Hardicanute, accession of, in 1039, i. 185; tyranny, dissoluteness, and death of, in 1042, 186.
 Hardinge, sir Henry, secretary at war, 1828, viii. 25; secretary for Ireland, 171; shares with him the gaining of the Ferozeshah victory, 404, 405.
 Hardware trade, temp. William and Anne, iv. 400.
 Hardwick, architect of Marylebone church, vii. 537.
 Hardwicke, Philip York, earl of, chancellor, 1737-1756, v. 585, vi. 138; introduces the Marriage bill, 1753, v. 593; retires from his office, 1756, vi. 21; negotiates with Newcastle and Pitt, 26; prepares George III.'s first speech in parliament, 54; speech on the independence of the judges, 1761, 56.
 Hardy, sir C., commands a fleet; tactics, vi. 217, 218.
 Hardy, captain, present at the battle of Copenhagen, vii. 158; and at Nelson's death at Trafalgar, 1805, 211.
 Hardy, Thomas, trial of, for high treason, October, 1794, vii. 35; Erskine's defence, 36, 37; acquittal of, 37.
 Hare, one of the conspirators against William's life, 1696, v. 26.
 Hargreaves, James, completes his spinning-jenny, 1767, vi. 345; how he discovered it, 345, 346; mobbed and ill-used, 346.
 Harley, president of the French parliament, fails in obtaining peace from the Dutch, v. 13; represents France at the Ryswick congress, 39.
 Harley. See Oxford, earl of.
 Harlow, his painting, vii. 543.
 Harold succeeds Canute as king of Mercia and Northumbria in 1035, i. 184; seduces Alfred, son of Ethelred, to land in England, and puts him to death, 185; death of, in 1039, 185.
 Harold, son of earl Godwin, banished with his father, i. 191; they return, and are favourably received by the inhabitants of London and Southwark, 196; character of, during the reign of Edward, 197; conduct and wrecked, made a prisoner by the earl of Ponthieu, but released by the interference of William of Normandy, 199, 200; assists William in his war against the duke of Brittany, 200; swears to support William in his claims to the throne of England, 201; returns to England, and suppresses an insurrection in Northumbria, 202; marries, 203; the crown of England bestowed on him by the Witan in Sept. 1066, 203; defeats his brother Tostig and the Norwegians, 206; is himself defeated and slain at Hastings in Oct. 1066, 207; buried at Waltham Abbey, 208.
 Harrington, earl of, English ambassador at Spain, v. 396.
 Harris. See Malmesbury, earl of.
 Harris conspired against William's life, 1696, v. 26.
 Harris, general, commands an Indian army; enters the Mysore territory, vii. 129.
 Harrison improves the spinning wheel, vi. 345.
 Harrison arrested at a Reform meeting, 1819, vii. 487.
 Harrowby, earl of, foreign secretary of state, 1804, vii. 640; president of the council, 552, 555; Cato-street conspiracy revealed to, by Hidon and Dwyer, 555; succeeded as president by the duke of Portland, 618; his partial advocacy of the Reform bill of 1832, viii. 101.
 Harwich, a great port of the eastern coast; vicissitudes of its condition in the 18th century, iv. 422.
 Hastings, battle of, Oct. 13, 1066, i. 207; obstinate resistance of the Saxons at, 207.
 Hastings, marquis of. See Moira, lord.
 Hastings, Warren, first governor-general of India, vi. 154, 427; previous career and conduct as governor of Bengal; nefarious bargains with the nabob of Oude, 428, 429; opposition towards, by the Indian council, 430; accused upon a charge of corruption by Nuncomar and others, 430; disputes with Francis; Clavering illegally assumes the governor-generalship on the false announcement of his having resigned, 431; reappointed at the expiration of his five years' term, 431; makes war against the Mahrattas, 432; duels with Francis, and quarrels with Impey, 433; pressed for money, 435; lays Cheyte Sing, the rajah of Benares, under heavy contributions; arrests him for neglect of payment, 436; a native insurrection compels him to release the rajah and quit the city; his heavy exactions from the nabobs and begums of Oude, 437, 438; his defence of his conduct in this case, 437; concludes peace with Tippoo Saib; his administration ceases, 1785, 438; acquitted of all the charges brought against him, 1784, vii.

- 56; examined before a committee of the House of Commons on Indian affairs, 1813, 623.
- Houghton, John, prior of the Charter House, with his brethren, refuses to take the oath of supremacy to Henry VIII., ii. 359; he is tried and executed, 359, 360.
- Havannah, conquest of the, 1762, vi. 66, 67.
- Haversham, lord, moves for inviting the princess Sophia to England, v. 169; his remarks on the Scotch, 178, 179; denounces the naval miscarriages of 1707, 201.
- Havre, bombarded by the British, 1694, iv. 592.
- Hawke, admiral, sir E., defeats the French fleet off Belle Isle, Oct., 14, 1747, v. 568; captures some French merchantmen, 1755, 600; supersedes Byng in the command of the fleet sent against the French, 1756, vi. 16; sent out on an expedition against Rochefort; quarrels with Mordaunt, and nothing is done, 35; driven, by stormy weather, from before Brest, 48; attacks the French fleet in Quiberon Bay, Sept. 20, 1759, and gains a victory; intrepid conduct in the battle, 48.
- Hawesbury, lord. See Liverpool, earl of.
- Hawkesmoor, his architectural works, v. 342.
- Hawley, general, left in command of the English troops in Scotland by the duke of Cumberland, 1745, v. 511; marches through Linlithgow to Falkirk; his contempt for the "undisciplined rabble," 545; he engages with them at Falkirk, Jan. 17, 1746; and is disgracefully defeated, 545; his retreat; causes several officers and soldiers to be tried by court martial; two soldiers are shot, 547.
- Hay, James, earl of Carlisle, lavish extravagance of king James towards, iii. 274; Clarendon's character of, 274.
- Hayden, count de, a Russian rear-admiral; present at the battle of Navarino, 1827, viii. 15, 16.
- Haydon, his paintings, vii. 544.
- Hazlitt, William, character of his essays, vii. 519.
- Head, sir Francis, governor of Canada; orders the "Caroline" to be burnt; repels the insurgents attacking Toronto, viii. 234.
- Healey, Joseph, a reformer; tried and imprisoned, 1820, vii. 560.
- Hearth money, iv. 384.
- Hemskerck, Dutch painter; patronized by William III., v. 349.
- Hengist and Horsa, landing of, in England, A.D. 449, i. 75.
- Henley. See Northampton.
- Henrietta Maria, advice of, to Charles, concerning Rupert, iii. 455; letter of, to Charles, 455; lands at Burlington with an army, 467; letter of, to Charles, 467; warns of, to her husband, 469; joins him, 475; her character, 475; enters Stratford-upon-Avon, and sleeps in Shakspeare's house, 476; meets Charles on his first battle-field, 476; conduct of, 484; goes to Exeter, 493; gives birth to a princess there, while being besieged by Essex, 493; flies to France, 495; condition of, at the Louvre, 624.
- Henriot, death of, 1794, vii. 46.
- Henry of Huntingdon, his account of the invasion of the Northmen or Danes, i. 94.
- Henry, surnamed Beau-Clerc, knighted in 1086, i. 245; is bequeathed 5000 pounds of silver by his father, 246; assists his brother, duke Robert, at the siege of Rouen, and kills Conan, 250; becomes possessed of Mount St. Michael, and maintains a siege against his two brothers, 251; hastens to England and seizes on the crown-treasures on the death of his brother William in 1100, 261; is crowned 261; publishes a charter of liberties, 262; finds the necessity of English support against the Norman barons, 262; reforms effected by, 262; marriage of, with Matilda, the niece of Edgar Atheling, 263; induces his brother Robert to relinquish his claim to the crown, to establish which he had invaded England, 264; subdues many of the disaffected barons, 265; quarrels with his brother for protecting Robert de Belesme, 266; fosters the disaffection of the barons in Normandy against Robert, 266; invades Normandy in 1105, 267; wins the battle of Tenchebrai, and takes Robert prisoner, 268, 269; the son of Robert is patronized by Louis of France, a war takes place, and the battle of Noyon is fought in 1119, 269; devastation of Normandy, 270; death of Matilda in 1118, 270; marriage of his son William the Atheling, 271; inhumanity of, towards the children of his natural daughter Juliana, wife of Eustace de Breteuil, 271; wreck of the Blanche-Nef, and the death of his son William, 272; second marriage of Henry in 1121 with Adelaide, 273; declares his daughter Matilda, the widow of the emperor of Germany, his heir, in 1126, 273; dies on Nov. 30, 1135, 274.
- Henry II., born in 1133, i. 274, 298; early career and marriage of, 298; is acknowledged successor to Stephen, 298; crowned on Dec. 19, 1154, 299; beneficial vigour of, in the establishment of order, 300; makes Thomas a Becket chancellor and his chief adviser in 1157, 302; character of, 304; sends Becket as ambassador to France, to contract a marriage between his eldest son and a daughter of the French king, 304; declines to surrender Maine and Anjou to his brother

- Geoffrey, and gives him a pension instead, 306; compels Malcolm of Scotland to surrender Cumberland and Northumberland, 306; invades Wales, and is unsuccessful, 306; continental wars of, 310; creates Becket archbishop of Canterbury, 315; state of secular law and establishment of law courts, 315, 316; evils of the clerical exemption from the secular law, 317; Constitutions of Clarendon passed to enforce the secular law, 318-320; the pope refuses to confirm them, Becket supports the pope's decision, is arraigned as a traitor, is found guilty, 321; and flies from England, 322; Henry convenes a synod at Oxford in 1166, which orders the persecution of heretics, 323; meets Becket at Touraine, in 1170, and a hollow peace is effected, 325; Becket returns to England and is murdered, 325-327; commands in Ireland in 1169, 328; commands Strongbow to return to England, who swears his innocence of Becket's murder before the pope's legate, and is absolved, 332; facts of the story of Rosamond Clifford, 332; rebellion of his sons, 333; imprisons his wife Eleanor, 333; insurrection in England repressed, 334; liberated on doing homage to Henry, 335; Henry does penance at the tomb of Becket, 335; is reconciled to his eldest son, 335; important reforms in the administration of justice effected by, 336; mission from Jerusalem in 1185 to urge Richard and John join the king of France in a war against him, 338; his sons July 6th, 1189, 339.
- Henry III. succeeds his father John on Oct. 18, 1216, when only ten years old, and is crowned at Gloucester, Oct. 28, i. 394; the battle of Lincoln gained against the French army of prince Louis, 395; the regent Pembroke dies in 1219, and is right preserved by the people to grant supplies, 397; the Charters confirmed in 1227, and asserts his right to govern his "own free will," 398; denial of with the pope continues his exactions on the people, 398; satirical and political songs, 399; marries Eleanor, daughter of the count of Provence, in 1236, 400; sale of justice by, 401; oppressions on the Londoners by, 401, disaffection observe them, 406; ill success of his foreign enterprises, 406; swears again to observe them, 407; value of money, and fluctuating prices of provisions in the reign of, 408, 409; taxation of the industry of the people by, and resistance made to by the clergy, 410; famine in 1238, 410; parliament meets at Westminster, and demands the appointment of a commission, 411; the "Provisions of Oxford," 412; obtains a dispensation from the pope to violate them, 413; a civil war takes place headed by Simon de Montfort, 413; prince Edward commands for his father against the barons, 414; taken prisoner at the battle of Lewes, 415; the queen collects troops abroad, but does not attempt to land in England, 416; burgesses summoned to parliament in 1264, by Simon de Montfort, 416; released by the issue of the battle of Evesham, in which de Montfort is slain, 417; Award of Kenilworth, and efforts of the parliament to restore tranquillity, 419; continued resistance of Simon de Montfort the younger, 420; dies, Nov. 16, 1272, 423.
- Henry IV. [see Hereford, duke of] ascends the throne, Sept. 30, 1399, i. 587; confederacy of nobles against, 590; revolt of the Welsh under Owen Glendower against, 491; is repulsed by Glendower, 592; accused of the murder of Richard II., 593; persecutes the followers of Wycliffe, 595; statute "de heretico comburendo" passed for the suppression of the Lollards, 595; burning William Salter, 596; the Commons pray for repeal of the statute, and he rejects the prayer, 597; signs a warrant for repeal of the statute, and he rejects the refusal to acknowledge him as king, 597; war with Scotland, and battle of Homildon Hill on Sept. 14, 1402, 598; revolt of the Percies against, and battle of Henry, 600; hostilities with France, 601; revolt of Archbishop Scrope and others, 602; suppression of the revolt, and execution of Scrope and Nottingham, 602; continued struggle of the Welsh, under Owen Glendower, 602; invades France, 603; dies, March 20, 1413, 604.
- Henry V. knighted by Richard II. in 1399, when eleven years old, i. 583; commands in Wales against the insurgents in 1402, 592; joins his father to oppose the revolt of the Percies, 599; is wounded at the battle of Shrewsbury, 599; obtains a victory over the Welsh in 1405, 601; early character of, 603; made Captain of Calais, 604; proclaimed king, March 21, 1413, ii. 13; clemency of, 13; alleged conspiracy of the Lollards, headed by sir John Oldcastle in 1414 against, 15;

suppressed, and all the conspirators pardoned except Oldecastle and eleven others, 15; claims the crown of France and the restoration of the old English possessions, 16; injustice of the demands, 17; preparations for the invasion of France, 17; conspiracy of the earl of Cambridge, lord Scrope, and others against, 18; lands near Harfleur, Aug. 14, 1415, 18; nature of the forces, 18; siege of Harfleur, 19; sickness of the English army, 20; march from Harfleur, 20; passage of the Somme, 22; description of Agincourt and its locality, 23; battle of Agincourt on Oct. 25, 1415, 25, 26; rejoicings in London on arrival of the news, 28; triumphant entry of, into London, 28, 29; the factions in France a cause of his success, 29; second expedition against France in 1417, 30; takes Caen, 20; besieges Rouen, 31; it surrenders after severe famine, 32; ineffectual conferences at Meulan, 33; the duke of Burgundy murdered at an interview with the Dauphin at Montreuil, 33; concludes a treaty with Philip, the young duke of Burgundy, 34; and the treaty of Troyes with Charles VI. on May 21, 1420, by which he was to marry Katherine and be recognized as heir to the crown on the death of Charles, 34; Henry and his queen return to England, 35; ill effects of his conquests on the condition of England, 35; the duke of Clarence killed, 36; releases James I. of Scotland, who accompanies him in his expedition to France in 1421, 37; besieges and takes Meaux, 37; dies Aug., 31, 1422, 38; estimate of the character of, 39.

Henry VI., born Dec. 6, 1421, ii. 37; succeeds his father, Sept. 1, 1422, and the dukes of Bedford and Gloucester are appointed Protectors by the parliament, 40; Charles VI. of France dies, and Henry is proclaimed king, 40; victory of Verneuil gained by the duke of Bedford, 41; tutelage of, under the earl of Warwick, 43; apparent severity of Warwick's discipline, 43, 44; siege of Orleans commenced, 46; Orleans is relieved by Joan of Arc, 50; is crowned king of France, at Paris, on Dec. 17, 1430, 57; death of the duke of Bedford, 78; continued disgraces and losses in France, 58; marries Marquet of Anjou, and surrenders or loses all the possessions in France, 59; the duke of Suffolk takes the side of cardinal Beaufort against the duke of Gloucester, 62; Gloucester and Beaufort die, 62, 63; rise of the house of York, 102; power of the duke of Suffolk, 102; impeachment and banishment of Suffolk, 104; his murder, 104; insurrection of Jack Cade in 1450, 105; other revolts in England, 107; unpopularity of Somerset, on account of his losses in France, 108; Henry becomes imbecile, 109; intrigues of the queen and Somerset to secure their power, 109; the duke of York elected Protector by the peers, 110; the king recovers his faculties, 111; self-hood of the barons, 111; Somerset is released from arrest, and York superseded, 111; York marches towards London, 111; first battle of St. Albans, on May 22, 1455, and death of Somerset, 112; is conducted to London by York, 112; a parliament summoned, and York made Protector a second time, 113; the parliament not revolutionary, but influenced by a desire to remove oppressive taxation, 114; the Protectorate superseded in 1456, 114; attempts to reconcile the Lancastrian and York factions, 115; commencement of the Civil War, in 1459, 116; battle of Blore Heath, 116; is taken prisoner at the battle of Northampton, in 1460, 117; a parliament assembled at Westminster, and York claims the crown, 118; the peers effect a compromise, that York should succeed on Henry's death, 119; the queen resists the compromise, and assembles an army, 119; battle of Wakefield, and death of York, Dec. 31, 1460, 119; Margaret advances to London, 119; Henry is deposed by parliament, and Edward IV. proclaimed, March 4, 1461, 120; battle of Towton, 122, 123; attainted in parliament for the death of Richard, duke of York, 126; renewed attempt of queen Margaret, in 1462; repulsed, 127; story of her throwing herself and son on the protection of an outlaw, 127; the king is recaptured, and Edward, and loss of the battle of Hexham, 129; the king is recaptured, and committed to the Tower, and Margaret retires to the Continent, 133; Margaret is reconciled to Warwick, 133; invades England with Warwick and Clarence, Edward is deserted, and Henry restored, 137; Warwick and Clarence appointed Protectors, 138; is taken prisoner at the battle of Barnet, and re-committed to the Tower, 142; queen Margaret lands at Weymouth, assembles forces, and is defeated at the battle of Tewkesbury, 143; she is taken prisoner, 145; death of Henry, in May, 1471, and doubts as to the duke of Gloucester having been his murderer, 145.

Henry VII. (earl of Richmond) taken by his uncle, the earl of Pembroke, to Brittany, after the battle of Tewkesbury, ii. 147; the duke of Buckingham and bishop Morton put themselves in communication with, previous to their revolt against Richard III., 177; assembles soldiers for a landing in England, 177; is prevented by a storm, 178; leaves Brittany to avoid being delivered up to Richard, 183; receives some forces from the king of France, and lands at Millford Haven, Aug. 7, 1485, 186; battle of Bosworth, Aug. 22, 187; crowned on the field of Bosworth, 190; parliamentary title to the crown given him, 191; marries Elizabeth of York, 192; suitability of the character of, for his times, 193; aversion of, to the House of York, 193; imprisons the earl of Warwick, Simmel, who pretended to be earl of Warwick, 195; suppression of the insurrection at the battle of Stoke, on June 4, 1487, 195; alleged harsh treatment of the dowager queen Elizabeth, 196; exhibits the real earl of Warwick to the people, 198; timid foreign policy of, 198; allows France to annex Brittany, 200; insurrection in the northern counties on account of oppressive taxation, 203; the earl of Northumberland killed, but the insurrection suppressed by the earl of Surrey, 200; invades France, in 1492, and invests Boulogne, 201; concludes a hurried peace on receiving a large sum of money from Charles VIII., 201; concludes a treaty with the duke of Burgundy, by which Warwick is compelled to serve the king de facto, 210; employment of spies by, 211; letters of Bothwell Warbeck and James IV., but they are compelled to retreat, 215; insurrection in Cornwall against renewed taxation, 215; suppressed, 216; concludes a treaty with James IV., by which Warbeck is forced to leave Scotland, 216; and flies to sanctuary at Beaulieu Abbey, 217; is repulsed, 216; is deserted, and surrenders, 218; Warbeck attempts to escape, his treatment of Warbeck after Tower, 218; exhibited to the public, and reads his confession, 218; the earl of Warwick accused of treason, and of joining in conspiracy with Warbeck, 219; Suffolk, to the Tower, 221; marries his eldest son, Arthur, to the princess Catherine of Arragon, in 1501, 222; account of the royal court, 222; his fondness for jewels, 223; encouragement by, of Cabot and his sons, 223; passion of, for wealth, 225; concludes a treaty with Scotland, and gives Margaret, his daughter, in marriage to James IV., in 1502, 225; his son Arthur dies, 225; marries Arthur's widow to his next son, Henry, after obtaining the pope's dispensation, 225; his queen Elizabeth dies, 226; seeks for an advantageous marriage for himself, 226; dies on April 21, 1509, 227; extortions of Henry through the agency of Empson and Dudley, 227; depression of the aristocracy by, 228; originates the Star-chamber court, 230; few parliaments held during his reign, 230; progress of maritime discovery in his reign, 237.

Henry VIII. succeeds his father, April 22, 1509, ii. 215; Empson and Dudley convicted and executed for extortion, 246; marriage of, to Catherine of Arragon, 246; remarkable modification of the coronation oath by, 246; skill of, in music, 248; interferes in favour of pope Julius II. in a war against France, 249; revives the claim to the crown of France, 250; claims a feudal superiority over Scotland, 250; retains his sister's legacy, in order to compel her husband, James IV. of Scotland, to abandon the French alliance, 251; an army sent to Spain to invade Guienne, 251; Wolsey, the almoner, acts as war-minister, 252; rise of naval warfare, and mutual ravages on the coasts of France and England, 254; despotic measures of, for the security of the coast, 254; expedition of, to France, in 1513, 255; ostentatious display of magnificence, 255; the emperor Maximilian takes military service under him, 256; wins the Battle of Spurs, 256; Terouenne and Tournay surrender, 257; war with Scotland, 257; ravages on both sides of the Scottish border, 261; attack by the French on Brighton, 261; peace with France, and marriage of the princess Mary to Louis XII., 261; death of Louis, and accession of Francis, 262; Henry asserts the rights of the crown against the claims of the clergy, 266; desires to be chosen emperor, and sends Pace on a mission to Germany, 268; Henry and Francis meet in the Field of the Cloth of Gold, 271; meets Charles V. at Gravelines, 273; conviction and execution of John Stafford, duke of Buckingham, 275; increasing despotism and cruelty of, 276; writes a book against Luther, "On the Seven Sacraments," 278; Leo X. bestows on him, in 1521, the title of "Defender of the Faith," 278; concludes a league with Charles V. against Francis I., 279; arbitrary measures of, to raise money, 280; riot of the Londoners on "Evil May Day," against the Flemish traders, 280; parliament summoned, in 1523, and earnest debate on the granting of a subsidy, 283-284; opposes the endeavour of his sister Margaret to obtain a divorce, 286; Scotland is invaded to enforce the removal of the duke of Albany from the regency, 286; the earl of Surrey destroys Jedburgh, and ravages the borders, 287; the duke of Suffolk sent with an army to France, in 1523, which devastates the country, but has no other success, 288; resistance of the people to taxes levied without the authority of parliament, 290-291; insurrection in Suffolk occasioned by, 291; the levy revoked, and the insurgents pardoned, 292; his opinion as to the war between the emperor and the pope, in 1527, 292; first agitation of the question of divorce from queen Catherine, 299; sends supplies to the pope while in confinement, 302; growing attachment of, to Anne Boleyn, 304-305; war declared against the emperor, 305; the pope sends a commission for Wolsey and cardinal Campegius to inquire into the validity of his marriage, 306; interview of the legates with Catherine, 309; unpopularity of the divorce with the people, 310; opening of the legate commission, on June 18, 1529, 311; Catherine refuses to acknowledge its jurisdiction, 312; is declared contumacious, 312; Wolsey is deprived of the Great Seal, on Oct. 17, 1529, 313; creates sir Thomas More chancellor, 316; the parliament passes statutes against ecclesiastical abuses, 319; opposition of the clergy to the reading of the scriptures, 320; the king is released from his debts by act of parliament, 323; Christmas amusements of, and large sums lost by, at gambling, 323; sends the earl of Wiltshire and Cranmer to obtain the pope's consent to the dissolution of his marriage, 325; opinions of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge in favour of the divorce, 326; hypocrisy of the plea of conscience for desiring a divorce, 327; grants a general pardon to Wolsey, who retires to his see, 328; causes him to be arrested for high treason, 330; unfeeling conduct of, on hearing of Wolsey's death, 331; commencement of the divorce with Wolsey as legate, England, 332; prosecutes the clergy for having submitted to Wolsey as legate, 333; fears being cited to Rome on the divorce cause, 333; threatens the pope with the loss of his power in England, but persecutes reformers, 334; requires Frith and Tyndale to renounce their errors and to return from the Netherlands to England, 334; the payment of annates to the see of Rome abolished by, in 1533, 335; increased cruelty and tyranny of, after the death of Wolsey, 335; severe laws passed against poisoners, gipsies, vagabonds, and for punishing wanderers by death on a third offence, 337-340; goes with Anne Boleyn to France in 1532, to meet Francis, 341; marries Anne Boleyn, 342; Cranmer pronounces sentence of divorce, on May 23, 1533, 344; description of the coronation of Anne Boleyn, by Cranmer, 344; Catherine steadily refuses to renounce the title of queen, 346; princess Elizabeth born, Sept. 7, 1533, 348; statute forbidding appeals to Rome passed, 349; statute for the punishment of heresy, 350; Frith burnt, 351; statute vesting the succession in the issue of queen Anne, 351; the Holy Maid of Kent and her visions, 352; she is tried and executed for treason, 352; Fisher, bishop of Rochester, and sir Thomas More, included in the charge, 353; they are sent to the Tower for refusing to swear to the illegality of the king's first marriage, 356; Act of Supremacy passed, 358; Act of Succession passed, with new definitions of treason, 358; execution of the monks of the Charterhouse for refusing to take the oath of supremacy, 361; Hollanders burnt for heresy, 361; the act allowing the free importation of books repealed, 361; Fisher and More tried for treason, convicted, and executed, 362; Cromwell appointed vicegerent, 366; visitation of the monasteries, in 1535, 367; statute for the dissolution of the smaller monasteries, 370; statutes passed for the regulation of trade and prices, 372; death of Catherine on Jan. 7, 1536, 373; Anne Boleyn suspected of heresy, 373; May-day at Greenwich, 1536, 374; Anne Boleyn sent to the Tower, 375; her letter to the king, 377, 389; Cranmer's letter to the king, 378; true bills found against Anne Boleyn and others, 380; her trial and execution on May 19, 1536, 382; her dying speech, 382; marriage of Henry to Jane Seymour, on May 20, 383; doubts as to the guilt of Anne, 385, 386; new law of succession passed, 387; state of Ireland, 391-395; rebellion of the Fitzgeralds in Ireland in 1534, 395; it is suppressed, and the Fitzgeralds executed, in violation of a promise given, 401; assumes the title of king of Ireland, 402; proclamation of, against holidays, 408; insurrection in Lincolnshire in 1536, occasioned by the proclamation, and the suppression of monastic establishments, 409; rude answer of, to the Lincolnshire petitioners, 409; the insurrection suppressed, 410; insurrection in Yorkshire, headed by Robert Aske, 410; crafty instructions of, to the duke of Norfolk, as to treating with the insurgents, 411; dissatisfaction of, with Norfolk, for granting a free pardon on their dispersion, 411; renewal of the insurrection in Yorkshire in 1537, 413; the insurgents repulsed from Carlisle and Hill, martial law proclaimed, and many hung, 413; execution of many of the leaders in London, 414; orders martial law to be proclaimed, which is to apply to monks and incanons that be faulty, 414; executions at Windsor for sympathy with the insurgents of the North, 415; birth of Edward VI., and death of queen Jane Seymour, 415; negotiations abroad for a new wife, 416; sanctions the printing of Coverdale's Bible, 417; disputes in Westminster Hall with John Lambert on the eucharist, 418; Lambert is burnt, 418; Act of 1539, for the dissolution of abbeys, 419; assigns pensions to the abbots, monks, and others who surrender,

423; wasteful disposal of the possession of the religious houses, 425; destruction of the buildings, 425; subserviency of the parliament summoned in 1539, 427; Acts passed for the dissolution of abbeys, and to enable Henry to found and endow bishoprics, 428; projected appropriations of the monastic revenues, and their subsequent misapplication, 430; suppresses the hospital of the Knights of St. John, 430; passing of the intolerant and atrocious statute of the Six Articles, in 1539, 431; persecutions and executions under this statute, 433; preposterous claim of, to unlimited obedience, embodied in this statute, 434; causes the De vorce, 435; the aged countess of Salisbury, Pole having written against his divorce, 436; marries Anne of Cleves, 438; dislikes her, 439; the marriage declared invalid, 440; causes Cromwell to be arrested, 441; and attainted of high treason, 441; Cromwell is executed, July 28, 1540, and on the same day Henry marries Catherine Howard, 442; heretics burnt for affirming the legality of his marriage with Catherine of Arragon, and for denying his supremacy, 443; the profanation of Catherine Howard revealed to him by Cranmer, 444; promises her life on confession, but breaks the promise, 445; she is attainted and executed, Feb. 12, 1541, 446; and another new treason declared by the Act of attainder, 446; marries Catherine Parr, in July, 1543, 447; endeavours to effect a marriage between his son Edward and Mary of Scotland, 449; sends the earl of Hertford to Scotland Beaton in his claims to supremacy, and in his attempt on the independence of Scotland, 453; sanctions a proposal to assassinate Beaton, 453; invades France with great pomp, having obtained a subsidy and a second extinction of his debts from parliament, in 1544, 455; besieges and takes Boulogne, 456; France, 457; peace concluded with France and Scotland, 458; continued persecution for heresies under Act of the Six Articles, 459, 460; relieves Cranmer from an accusation of heresy, 462; Anne Askew and others burnt, 463; queen Catherine Parr suspected of heresy, 464; the duke of Norfolk and earl of Surrey arrested on charges of high treason, 465; Surrey beheaded, and Norfolk re- Henry on Jan. 28, 1547, 466.

Henry IV., of France, succeeds to the throne in August, 1589, iii. 184; English expedition sent in aid of, 185; abjures the Protestant religion, 191; concludes a separate treaty with Spain, 207; sends Sully to congratulate James I. on his accession, 240; is assassinated in 1610, 285; scheme of, for an European confederacy, 285.

Henry, Patrick, his early career, vi. 85; his eloquence in opposing the Stamp act, 175, 86.

Heptarchy, little interest afforded by the events of the, i. 88; incessant wars during the, 89.

Hereford, Henry duke of (afterwards Henry IV.), quarrel of, with the duke of Norfolk, i. 579; is banished, 581; his patrimony seized by Richard II., 582; lands at Ravenspur, July 4, 1399, 583; interview of, with Richard II., 584; entry of, with the captive Richard, into London, 585; claims the crown, 587; his hereditary pretensions, 588; superior right of Edmund Mortimer, the progenitor of the House of York, 588. See Henry IV.

Hereward heads an insurrection in 1072, in the isle of Ely, i. 225; successes of, 225; is compelled to submit to William I., 227; fate of, 227.

Hermann, general, defeated by the French and Dutch, 1799, vii. 139.

Hero-worship, ancient tumult, probable memorials of, i. 24.

Heries, J. C., chancellor of the exchequer, viii. 13; quarrels with Huskisson, 16; secretary at war, 171.

Herschell, sir William, discovered Uranus, 1781, vii. 520; his great telescope erected at Slough, Aug. 28, 1781, 520.

Hertford, Edward Seymour, earl of, commands the forces in the invasion of Scotland, and burns Leith, ii. 450; ravages the southern counties, 451; conceals for a time the will of Henry VIII., 521; raised to the office of Protector by the executors of the will, and created duke of Somerset, 521; endeavours to enforce the treaty for the marriage of Edward VI. with the queen of Scotland, 523; invades Scotland and proposes terms for an Union, 524; wins the battle of Pinkie and returns to London, 527; causes Henry VIII.'s statutes of treason and other arbitrary laws to be repealed, 529; difficulties of the government of, arising from the circumstances of the times and his own character, 534; causes his brother, Lord Thomas Seymour, to be attainted for treason, and signs the warrant for his execution, 537; probable guilt of Seymour, and justification of Somerset, 538; evidence of Sharrington against Seymour, 538, 539; ineffectual endeavours of Somerset to redress grievances, 540; proclamations against unreasonable prices and against inclosures, 541; insurrection in Cornwall and Devonshire against innovations in religion, 542; suppressed at the battle of

- Cliff, near Exeter, 514; insurrection of Ket the tanner in Norfolk, against inclosures, 546; suppressed by the earl of Warwick at Mousehold heath, 549; marriage of Mary of Scotland to the dauphin of France, and war declared with both those countries, 550; successes of the Scotch, 550; becomes obnoxious to the nobility from his protection of the rights of the poor, 551, 552; confederacy of the nobles, headed by Warwick against, 553; issues a proclamation inviting the king's subjects to repair to Hampton Court, where Edward was, for the king's protection, 554; fails to get the support of the army or to move the people to rise in his favour, 554; removes Edward to Windsor, 555; lord Russell and the army join Warwick, 555; is arrested, 557; conveyed to the Tower, 557; articles exhibited against, 558; the Protectorship is revoked, he is imprisoned till Feb. 6, 1550, and fined, 559; attempts of, to re-establish his power, 565; is arrested and tried for high treason, 567; acquitted of treason and found guilty of felony, 567; is beheaded January 22, 1551, 568; character of, and his influence on the progress of the Reformation, 569.
- Hertford, lord, English ambassador at Paris, vi. 81.
- Hervey, lord, vice-chamberlain, 1730, v. 435; duels with Pulteney; character of, 440; conversation of, with Walpole on Caroline's death, 464.
- Hervey, colonel, advises Wellington to cease pursuing the enemy at Waterloo, vii. 404.
- Hesse, elector of, subsidied by England, v. 600.
- Hewlet, lady, her bequest; discussion as to the claimants thereof, viii. 372, 373.
- Hexham, battle of, May 15, 1464, ii. 129.
- Hicks, Mrs., hanged for witchcraft, 1716, v. 314.
- Hickson, an agent of the young Pretender; apprehended, v. 515.
- Hickson, his description of the evils of the poor-law system, viii. 154.
- Hidon, Thomas, reveals the Cato-street conspiracy, vii. 555.
- High and Low Church, introduction of the distinction of, iv. 469.
- Highlanders, description of the, by Cunningham, iv. 489; government proceedings against the, 538, et seq.; their share in the rebellion of 1715, v. 366-389; description of the; the Black Watch, or 42nd Regiment, 498, 499; aid the rebellion of 1745, 505-516; costume of, early part of the 18th century, 517, 518; their further operations in the rebellion of 1745, 1746, 523-533, 539-566; drafted into the British army by Chatham, vi. 22.
- Higs, Thomas, invents a machine similar to the "jenny," vi. 346, 347.
- Highwaymen, 18th century, vi. 392, 393.
- Hill, colonel, commands the garrison at Fort William, 1690, iv. 539; his share in the Glencoe massacre, 541, 542, 547; declared not guilty by the Scotch parliament, 552.
- Hill, captain, murders Mountford, the player, iv. 576.
- Hill, general, his struggle with Soult, Dec. 1813, vii. 352.
- Hill, Frederic, first inspector of Scotch prisons; their state according to his reports, viii. 191.
- Hill, sir G. F., vice-treasurer of Ireland, vii. 552.
- Hill, M. D., M. P. for Hull; description of Agnew's Sabbath Observance bill, viii. 132; history of public opinion on the question of counsel for prisoners by, 189, 190.
- Hill, Rowland, revolutionizes the routine of the Post Office, viii. 212; his proposed penny postage plan; opposition to it; it is tried and found completely successful, 256, 257.
- Hill, T. W., his remarks on Worcestershire potato cultivation, vi. 323, 324; engaged in the Birmingham riots, 1791, 508, 509.
- Hillsborough, lord, secretary for the colonies, 1768-1772, vi. 123, 140, 603; orders Bernard to rescind the resolution adopted by the Massachusetts Assembly to oppose the Revenue act, 124; accused of garbling the council minutes; appoints lord Botetourt governor of Virginia, in room of sir J. Amherst, 127; secretary of state, 1770-1782, 603.
- Hislop, sir Thomas, commands the army of the Deccan, vii. 625.
- Hispaniola. See San Domingo.
- Historian, provinces and duties of the, i. Introduction.
- History, specimens of the false elements of, vii. 423; differently treated by our leading historians, Macaulay, Hallam, and Carlyle, viii. 312-315.
- Hoadley, Dr. Benjamin; his treatises burnt by the mob, v. 226; bishop of Salisbury; urges Walpole to give the Dissenters promise of future relief, 435.
- Hobhouse, his objection to the Income tax, vii. 106.
- Hobhouse, sir J. C., secretary of state, viii. 135; president of the board of control, 203; his speech, moving a vote of thanks to the Indian army, 288.
- Hoche, sergeant, commands a detachment of French guards in the riots, 1789, vi. 488; his exploits at Quiberon, 1795, vii. 57; appointed to command the expedition to Ireland, 1796, 71.

- Hofer, Andrew, leader of the Tyrolese insurrectionists, 1809, vii. 289; his exploits, 290; capture and death, Feb. 20, 1810, 291.
- Hoffland, a river scenery painter, vii. 548.
- Hogarth, William, the regenerator of modern English painting, v. 349, 366; his character as a painter, 350; his pictures a delineation of contemporary manners, 351, 352; dramatic character of his paintings and prints, 352; the life of the streets as shown in his works, 331, 333; profligacy among the high and low ranks of society, 351; manner of the time as delineated in his pictures of the scene at the cockpit and at the gaming house, 355; that of the rake's levee, 356; marriage-a-la-mode, 356; in his election prints, 357; in his pictures of "The Sleeping Congregation," 359; and "Credulity, Superstition, and Fanaticism, a medley," 359; attacked by Wilkes in the "North Briton," vi. 78; his caricature portrait of Wilkes; attacked by Churchill, 78; whose portrait he publishes, 78.
- Hohenlinden, battle of, Dec. 3, 1800, vii. 150.
- Hollenlohe, prince of, commands the Prussians at Jena, vii. 244.
- Holbein, Hans, productions of, under Henry VIII., ii. 510.
- Holbourne, admiral, shrinks from attacking the French, vi. 36.
- Holeroff, Thomas, remarks on Hardy's trial, vii. 35, 36.
- Holderness, earl of, secretary of state, 1751-1761, vi. 26, 45, 139; removed from this office, 1761, 57.
- Holkar, a Mahratta chief, vii. 219; war declared against, 1804; subdued by the British, 226.
- Holkar the younger aids the Pindarees in their war with the British, vii. 625; defeated Dec. 21, 1817, at the battle of Meehudpore; peace concluded with the British, Jan. 6, 1818, 626.
- Holland, Henry, his architectural designs, vii. 534.
- Holland, lord. See Fox, Henry.
- Holland, lord, remarks on lord North's conduct, 1781, vi. 258; his account of North's announcement of his resignation, 1782, 262; remarks on the income tax, vii. 106; a member of the Grenville ministry, 246; defends himself for defending lord Grey, 1827, 613; chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, viii. 68, 203.
- Holland annexed to France, 1810, vii. 314.
- Holmes, major, concerned in the assassination plot, 1696, v. 26, et seq.
- Holsten Beck, prince of, takes an active part in the battle of Blenheim, 1704, v. 143.
- Holwell, his account of the tragedy of the Black Hole, vi. 27, 28.
- Holy Alliance. See Alliance.
- Home, John, his estimate of the Highland forces, 1745, v. 511; his description of the battle of Falkirk, 543, 546.
- Homildon-Hill, battle of, 1402, i. 598.
- Hompesch, general, pursues the Gallo-Bavarian army after their defeat at Blenheim, v. 144.
- Hone, William, prosecuted for libel, vii. 465; his first, 466; second, 468; and third trials, 469, 470; in all he is found not guilty.
- Hood, captain, present at the battle of the Nile, 1798, vii. 102.
- Hood, sir Samuel, unable to hinder De Grasse's operations, 1781, vi. 245, 251; joined by Rodney, 1782, 263; compels the "Ville de Paris" to strike, 265; captures four French vessels, 266; sails against Toulon; negotiates with the inhabitants, vii. 19; the fleet and port are surrendered on his agreeing to support them in the restoration of peace and monarchy, 19; compelled to evacuate the place by the French, 22, 23.
- Hood, Thomas, his poetry, viii. 325, 326.
- Hook, Theodore, his novels, viii. 308, 309.
- Hooke, colonel, a Jacobite agent; offers French assistance to the Cameronians, and other Scots disaffected towards the government, v. 202.
- Hooper, bishop of Gloucester, martyrdom of, ii. 613.
- Hore, sir John, retreats through Spain, 1808, vii. 275, 276; succeeds to the command of the army on Moore's death; embarks his troops, 278; captures Balizac and the South Beveland, 1808, 291; battles against Soult, 1813, 352.
- Horne, Francis, remarks of, on the reduction of the circulating medium, 1816, vii. 430; died Feb. 6, 1817, 472.
- Horton, Mrs., her connection and marriage with the duke of Cumberland, vi. 149, 150.
- Hosier, admiral, blockades Porto Bello, v. 426.
- Hospitals, London medical, dates of the opening of the, vi. 423.
- Honchard, general in the French army; defeats the Austrians near Hondscote, Sept. 8, 1793, vii. 15; the convention puts him to death for not stopping the English in their retreat from Dunkirk, 15.
- Howard, Mrs. See Suffolk, lady.

Howard, John, high sheriff of Bedfordshire; his philanthropical effort to remedy the state of prisoners; publication of his book "on prisons," 1777, vi. 421, 422.

Howe, Richard, earl; captain; captures two French vessels, 1755, v. 599; takes Aix, 1757, vi. 35; reinforces the troops in America; appointed one of the British commissioners, 184; employs conciliatory measures towards the Americans, 189; his negotiations with Franklin and others, 192; sails to Newport; hindered from engaging the enemy by a storm, 213; admiral; gives chase to the Brest fleet, vii. 41, 42; gains a victory over it, June 1, 1794, 42; his personal visit to the fleet quells the mutiny at Spithead, 82.

Howe, major-general sir William, engaged in the battle of Breed's, or Bunker's hill, 1775, vi. 177; leads an attack against the Americans, 178; left in command of the British American army, 180; leaves Halifax; lands in Staten Island, 1776, 184; his letter to George Washington, Esq., refused, 189; gains the battle of Brooklyn, 190; his further operations against Washington, 1776, 190, 191; evacuates Jersey; his strategic movements, 1777, 199.

Howe, lord, slain at the head of his regiment in America, 1758, vi. 40.

Hudson's Bay Company, chartered 1760, iv. 429.

Huggins, John, reprimanded for selling the wardenship of the Fleet, v. 437.

Hull, port of, and trades, iv. 414; whale fishery carried on by the vessels of, 414; obtains parliamentary representation, 1832, viii. 116.

Hull, general, capitulates to Brock, 1812, vii. 369.

Hullin aids in attacking the Bastille, 1879, vi. 481.

Humbert, general, commands the French force sent to Ireland, vii. 115; which surrenders to general Lake, Sept. 8, 1799, 116.

Hume, erroneous statement of, as to the condition of Britain in the third century, i. 45.

Hume, M.P. for Montrose; his complaints on behalf of queen Caroline, vii. 557; moves the issuing of a proclamation for her coronation, 571; his efforts to promote the recognition of true principles of financial economy, viii. 22; votes for Littleton as speaker, 127; reviews the work of the session of 1736, 186.

"Hundred Days," account of the crisis called the, vii. 385, 392-404.

Hunne, Richard, persecution of, for heresy and being possessed of Wycliffe's books, ii. 265; violent death of, 265; the bishop of London's chancellor accused of his murder, 265.

Hunt, Henry, attends a meeting of the Hampden club in London, vii. 451; and also the Spa-field meeting, 453, 454; fails in being returned M. P. for Westminster, 480; presides over a reform meeting in Smithfield, 487; takes the chair at the great reform meeting at Manchester, 1819, 488; he is arrested and tried, 492; found guilty and punished, 560.

Hunt, Leigh, his "Story of Rimini" published, 1816, vii. 509; charm and pleasantness of his essays, 129.

Hunt, Robert, his evidence of the assassination plot, 1696, v. 26, 27.

Huskinson, William, present at the taking of the Bastille; defends his conduct in the French revolution, vi. 491, 492; praises Louis's firmness in the insurrection of the 20th of June, 1792, 535; first commissioner of Woods and Forests and Land revenues, vii. 552; president of the board of trade, Jan. 1823; obtains a seat in the Cabinet, 1825; develops a system of commercial policy on a broad and liberal basis; his reciprocity of duties bill passed, July 4, 1823, 592; clamour against his proposal to abolish the prohibitory duties on silk; vindicates his motives for advocating free trade, 592; he is eloquently defended by Canning, 593, 594; colonial secretary in the Goderich ministry, 1827, vii. 13; his differences with Mr. Herries causes lord Goderich to resign, 16; joins the Wellington administration, 16; opposes the repeal of the Corporation and Test Acts, 23; compelled, for consistency's sake, to vote against the government, he retires from the ministry, 1828, 25; his speech on the power of steam; returned M. P. for Liverpool, 60; present at the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester railway, 61; killed by an accident Sept. 15, 1820, 62.

Huss, John, adopts the tenets of Wycliffe, ii. 13; is summoned to Constance and there burnt in 1145, 13.

Hussey, Dr., remarks of, on the state of Ireland, 1796, vii. 109, 110.

Hutchinson, colonel, studies the state of public affairs, iii. 394; conference of, with lord Newark, 436; defends Nottingham Castle with bravery, 476; returned as member of parliament, 516; presents a petition in favour of sir John Owen, 591, 592; goes to London, and submits like others, to Cromwell's government, iv. 31, effects of the Civil War described by Mrs. Hutchinson, 43; she cites the colonel as a good example of an accomplished gentleman of the Independent party, 46; kind of life led by, after his retirement from public affairs, 48; reveals Lambert's plot to Oliver Cromwell, 99.

Hutchinson, governor of Massachusetts, vi. 128; removes all the troops from Boston, 130; superseded in his post by general Gage, 163.

Hutchinson, general, engages the French at Castlebar, vii. 116; succeeds to the command of the army in Egypt; invests Cairo, 163.

Hutchinson, lord, appointed to offer queen Caroline an annuity under certain conditions, vii. 561, 562.

Hutton William, established a circulating library at Birmingham, 1751, vi. 384; remarks on a handbill celebrating the fall of the Bastille, 1791, 166; his warehouse plundered by the Birmingham mob, 509.

Huy taken by Marlborough, 1703, v. 122; by Villeroy, 1705, 165.

Hyde, sir Edward. See Clarendon, earl of.

Hyder-Ali defeats the English in Madras and obtains possession of the country, vi. 153, 154; his inroad upon the Carnatic, 434, defeated by Coote, 435; death of, 1782, 438.

G.

IBRAHIM BEY evacuates Cairo, 1798, vii. 100.

Ibrahim Pasha, proceedings of, at Navarino and the Morea, 1827, viii. 14.

Imhoff, Mrs., married Warren Hastings, vi. 431.

Impey, sir Elijah, chief justice of the Supreme Court at Calcutta; causes Nuncomar to be tried for forgery, vi. 430; who is found guilty and executed, 431; quarrels with Hastings, 433; collects evidence against the begums of Oude, 436.

Impressment, system of, established by law, 1704, v. 132; evils of impressment exaggerated, vii. 365.

Inclosure Bills passed, 1760, 1779, vi. 300; 1789, 1797, vii. 75.

Income, Gregory King's scheme of the, of the various grades of society in 1688, iv. 424, 425, 456; of clergy compared with that of other classes, temp. queen Anne, 451.

Income-tax, first proposed by Pitt, 1798; objections to it, vii. 105-107; proposed continuance of, 1816; opposition to it; the proposal rejected, 422, 423; renewal of, proposed by sir R. Peel, and resolved upon by parliament, notwithstanding great opposition, viii. 341; re-imposition of, proposed by sir R. Peel, 379.

Indemnity Acts for Dissenters passed, 1727-1828, v. 436.

Indemnity Act passed, 1766, to exonerate those who had advised an embargo on corn, vi. 99.

Indemnity bill introduced, 1689, iv. 471.

Indemnity bill, 1818, vii. 477.

Independents. See Nonconformists.

India bill, Fox's, brought forward, Nov. 18, 1783; the plan of government proposed, vi. 441; opposition to it; carried in the House of Commons, Dec. 9, 1783; rejected in the Lords, 442, 443; Pitt introduces his, Jan. 11, 1784; thrown out, and Fox's re-introduced, 446; Pitt's India bills passed; plan of government laid down by them, 450.

Indian affairs, history of, 1744-1754, v. 592-596; 1756-1757, 26-32; 1760-1773, 152-154; 1773-1784, vi. 427-438; India bills of Fox and Pitt, 440, 443, 416, 450; history, from 1785 to 1793, 572, 577; 1798, 1799, vii. 128, 130; 1799, 1806, 217, 228; 1807-1826, 620, 635; 1833, 1842, viii. 286, 300; 1842-1844, 356, 361; 1845, 1846, 404, 405.

Indian Trade Reform bill suffered to drop, 1692, iv. 558.

Indians employed by the Americans, 1759, vi. 45; by the British, 1777, 199; Chatham denounces the practice as a national stain, 202, 203; Burgoyne defends his conduct in employing them, 215, 216; destruction of Wyoming by, 1778, 216, 217; again employed by the British, 1812, vii. 369; their steadiness and order praised by Brock, 369.

Industrious classes, state of the, temp. Richard I., i. 360-362; sports, games, and amusements of, 362, 363.

Industry; variety of employments among the western counties of England, iv. 397; the hardware trade of Birmingham, 400; earthenware trade 401; glass manufacture, 402; stocking trade, 403; progress and vicissitudes of the lace trade, 404; Lombe's silk mill completed in 1717, 401; progress of the silk trade, 405; rapid development of the cotton trade between 1700 and 1850, 409; linen trade at Warrington, and discouragement given to it, 412; most prosperous when guided by natural laws, 412; of the Yorkshiremen in queen Anne's time, 414; of Leeds, 414; cutlery trade of Sheffield, 414; imports, exports, and trade of Hull, 414; the coal trade, 415, 417; the salmon trade, 417; of Scotland, very limited before the Union, in 1707, 417; of the inhabitants in the Norwich district, 421; curious evidence of this, 421; great difficulty of passing from one occupation to another about the time of queen Anne, 439, 440; jealousy of the great formerly shown towards the rise of the lower classes, 441; progress of the national, in agriculture, vi. 300, 339; and the arts, 340, 363; general depression