

- Longchamp, William, appointed chancellor of England by Richard, is deposed by prince John, in 1190, i. 349; retires to Flanders, and writes to Richard, 350.
- Longwy taken by the Prussians, Aug. 22, 1792, vi. 542, 549.
- Losowitz, battle of, Oct. 1, 1756, vi. 19.
- Lotteries, multitudinosity of, temp. William III., iv. 431, 589; suppressed 1698, 431.
- Loudon, earl of, commands the British troops in America, vi. 22; shrinks from attacking Louisbourg, 36; censured and recalled, 40; surprises Frederick in his camp, 41.
- Loughborough, A. Wedderburn, lord, solicitor-general, 1771; reproves Fox's expression of "criminals," vi. 136; insults Franklin, 157; attorney-general; his opinion on the employment of the military in suppressing riots, 222; supports Fox's Libel bill, 1792, 526; attempts to promote a union between Fox and Pitt, hoping thereby to obtain the lord chancellorship, 530; his further intrigues for the same object are successful; he obtains the great seal, Jan. 28, 1793, 561; his "Traitorous Correspondence" bill passed in a modified form, 584; his extravagant idea of the success of the British arms in Holland, 589; principal adviser of the trials of Hardy and others; anecdote of George III. and, vii. 38; his opinion on the order forbidding the Bank to pay in cash, 73, 74; one of "the king's friends," 152; opposes the concessions to Catholics, 153; resigns his chancellorship, 1801, 155; lord chancellor, 1783, 639.
- Louis, prince, of Baden, commands the allied armies in 1704, alternately with Marlborough, 135; aids him in gaining the battle of the Schellenberg or Donauwert, July 2, 1707; despatched by Marlborough to carry on the siege of Ingoldstadt, 140; conducts the siege of Landau, in 1715, i. 391; arrives in England, and Louis of France offered the crown of England, in 1715, i. 391; suspected treachery, and decline of the popularity of, 392; his forces are defeated at Lincoln by the earl of Pembroke, 395; and a fleet with reinforcements destroyed near Dover, 395; makes a treaty with Henry III., and withdraws, 396.
- Louis, XI., of France, meets Edward IV., and cajoles him into a disgraceful treaty, ii. 48; breaks off the contract for the marriage of the dauphin with Edward's daughter, 155.
- Louis XIV.; extent of his aid to King James, 1690, iv. 509; receives James' project of invading England, with coldness, 516; his power and kingdom, 525; himself, not the French, the real enemy of England, 526; besieges Mons and compels it to surrender, 532; on the death of his minister Louvois he offers his assistance to James in invading England, 560; conducts the siege of Namur, 563; which surrenders to him, 565; his position and opinions, 573; the routine of his day, 579; prepares for a campaign, 1693, 580; suddenly leaves his army and returns to Versailles, 580; promises to aid James in invading England, if the Jacobites rise, v. 25; negotiates for peace with William III., 1697, 39; the treaty of Ryswick is concluded, 40; his reception of the English ambassador, Portland, 1688, 51; sends count Tallard as his ambassador at the court of William, 51; William's dread of Spain and the Indies being acquired by, 72; seizes the Spanish crown for his grandson William in opposition to the terms of the two partition treaties, 77; suspected of bribing the English, 80; his ostentatious extravagance and that of his court bring about the poverty of the nation, 86; his policy, 87; attempts to influence Charles of Spain to place the succession in the Bourbon family, 91; he accepts the will of Charles, 93; his grandson succeeds to the Spanish dominions, 93; on the death of James II., in 1701, he proclaims his son the prince of Wales, as James III., king of England, 103; concentrates the military of France upon Germany, 133; receives news of the defeat of his armies at Blenheim, 146; feels his losses in the Low Countries; invited to invade Scotland, 174; pride roused by Marlborough's demands; his example, and appeal to his subjects, fires the spirit of the nation, 212; anguish at the exhausted state of Charles of Austria to the German empire, 234; secretly promotes the election of Charles of Austria to the German empire, 1711, 250; makes viscount Bolingbroke a present of a ring worth 4000*l.* during his embassy at Paris, 1713, 273; his concessions in the peace of Utrecht, 273; died Sept. 1, 1715, 368.
- Louis XV., of France, is declared of age; takes upon himself the government of France; appoints duke de Bourbon his minister, v. 425; refuses to marry the infanta of Spain to whom he was betrothed, 425; joins his army at Fontenoy, 1745; urged to retire from the battle by marshal Saxe, but he spiritedly remains to see the battle out, 495; sends an army to invade Brabant, 1747; present at the battle of Laufeld, 568; sensitiveness to Frederick the Great's ridicule, vi. 17, 18; sides with Maria Theresa in the Seven Years' war, 1756, 18; his nervousness caused by an attempt on his life by Damiens, 1757; misery of

- the country and extravagance of the court, 59; died, May 10, 1774, 160; reigned 1715-1774, 603.
- Louis XVI. quarrels with his parliament, vi. 471; attends the meeting of the states-general, 1789, 474-475; his views on the union of the three orders, 477; agrees to the formation of the national assembly, 477; refuses to withdraw the troops stationed between Paris and Versailles, 478; yields to the people's demands, 482; revived loyalty of the national guard towards, 486; his audience with the Parisian women, 487; besieged in the Versailles palace by the mob, 488-489; himself and family removed to Paris, 488; his speech at the sitting of the national assembly, Feb. 4, 1790, 494; attends the federation fête, 499-500; his deposition demanded by the mob, 511; himself and family vigilantly watched; he escapes with it from Paris, July 21, 1791, 511-512; is captured at Varennes, and conducted back to Paris, 514-515; applies his veto to the decrees against the emigrants, 520; desires emigrants to disarm; war with Austria; his powers as king, 532; insulted by Roland whom he dismisses; agrees to the formation of a camp near Paris, but not to the deportation of priests, 534; his firmness in the interview with the insurrectionists of June, 1792, 535; his deposition again demanded, 539; blockaded in the Tuileries by the mob; places himself and family under the assembly's protection, 539; removal of the royal family to the Temple, 541; all the members of which are there harshly treated, 556-557; he is impeached at the bar of the convention, 558; anxiety for his fate shown in the British parliament, 558; his trial, 567-568; condemnation, 569; and execution, Jan. 21, 1793, 570; proceedings of the British parliament, 570.
- Louis XVII., of France, presented to the people at the federation fête, 1790, vi. 499; unharmed by the people at the opera, 519; present at Louis XVI.'s interment, Aug. 1792, 536; death of, in the Temple, Paris, June 8, 1795; shameful treatment of, vii. 58.
- Louis XVIII., of France, enters Paris, May 3, 1814, vii. 356; reception of, on his entry into London, 357; retrospect of his restoration, 385-390; promulgation of the constitutional charter, 385, 386; its provisions, 385, 386; partly his own work, 386; discontent shown under his government, 387-389; deserted by marshal Ney, dissolves the chambers and removes his court from Paris to Ghent, 392; public entry into Paris, July 8, 1815, 409; execution of Labedoyere and war against Spain, 416; evacuation of France by the allied troops, 1818, 481; declares throw of Spain, 584; death of, Sept. 6, 1824; his good sense preserves his kingdom from convulsions, viii. 41, 42; anecdote of, 44; reigned from 1814 to 1824, vii. 636; viii. 68.
- Louis Philippe (France) present at the battle of Valmy, 1792, vi. 549; and at that of Jemappes, 1792, 551; appointed lieutenant-general of France, 1830, viii. 52; opens the legislative session; accepts the throne of France, Aug. 9, 53; his daughter married to King Leopold of Belgium, 1832; death of the duke of Reichstadt, 194, 195, his government and frequent changes of ministry; attempts to assassinate him by Fieschi (1835), Alibaud and Meunier (1836), 195; his fears of Louis Napoleon, 196, 197; the king's perplexity caused by America; compels his extradition from Switzerland, 197, 198; the king sends him to Louisa, 375; his Spanish marriage plans, 417; doubts as to his friendliness towards England, 417, 418; his abdication 418-420; stormed in his palace by the mob, and compelled to fly, 421.
- Louisbourg capitulates to the British, 1758, vi. 40.
- Louvain given up to Marlborough, 1706, v. 174-175.
- L'Ouverture, Toussaint, accomplishes the freedom of the St. Domingo slaves; commander-in-chief of their armies, 1796, vii. 175, 176; president and governor for life, 1801; Bonaparte sends an expedition against him, 176; resists, but is compelled to submit; arrested and imprisoned; died April 27, 1803, 176.
- Louvois, chief minister of France; suspected to have been poisoned, 1792, iv. 560; favours Dumont's plot against William III., 568.
- Lovat, Simon Fraser, lord, takes possession of Inverness for government, v. 376; his perfidy and wavering conduct during the rebellion of 1747, 548; he is impeached by the House of Commons, Dec. 1746; trial of, 562; and death, 563.
- Lowe, sir Hudson, governor of St. Helena; complained of as being harsh to Napoleon, vii. 574.
- Lowick tried for conspiring against William III.; and executed, v. 32.
- Lowry, his engraving machine, vii. 550.
- Lucerne, prince de, present at Cornwallis's surrender, vi. 253.
- Lucius, or Lever Maur, "who reigned in Britain, A. D. 180," doubtful statement

- of his having become a Christian under pope Eleutherius, and having built the chapel in Dover Castle, i. 63.
- Luddism active in 1812, vii. 323; in 1816, 433; in 1817, 458; in 1830, viii. 55; and in 1831, 91.
- Ludlan, Isaac, executed for insurrection, vii. 462.
- Ludlow, Edmund, parliament wishes to apprehend him, 1689, on hearing of his being in London; he returned to Vevay, iv. 498.
- Lundy appointed governor of Lundy by William, iv. 477; but being suspected of an intention to surrender he is turned out by the townspeople, 478.
- Luneville, peace of; preliminaries signed July 28, 1800, vii. 149; and completed on Feb. 9, 1801, 150, 170.
- Luther, Martin, denouncement of the sale of indulgences by, ii. 263; attends the Diet at Worms, 277; intrepid behaviour of, before the Diet, 278; Henry VIII. writes a book against, 278; Luther's works burnt at Paul's Cross, 279; spread of the doctrines of, in Germany, 295.
- Luttrell, col., his motion against Wilkes, vi. 105; opposes Wilkes as a candidate for Middlesex; defeated; but is declared to be the legal representative, 1769, 106.
- Luttrell, Temple, proposes a measure for manning the navy, 1777, vi. 135.
- Lützen, battle of, May 2, 1813, vii. 345.
- Luxemburg, French general, gains the battle of Fleurus, 1690, iv. 525; helps Louis in besieging Namur, 564; defeats William III. at Steinkirk, 566; campaign of 1693, 580, et seq.; again defeats the allowance of counsel to prisoners, 582.
- Lynch, J. S. Copley, lord; advocates the allowance of counsel to prisoners, v. 127; sergeant; Watson's counsel, 1817, vii. 455; lord chancellor, 1827, 611, 618; resigned 1830, viii. 64; moves that the disfranchising clauses of the Reform bill be postponed, 192; negotiates for the formation of a ministry willing to carry out an extensive parliamentary reform, 1832, 105; his temporary government with the duke of Wellington, 1835, 169; lord chancellor in the Peel ministry, 171; opposes the Municipal Reform bill, 182; his hostile speech against the Melbourne government, 1836, 185, 186; approves of the bill for allowing counsel to prisoners, 189-190.
- Lyndsay, Patrick, M.P., for Edinburgh; his speech on the Porteous riots, v. 455; evidence of, on these riots, 458-459.
- Lyon, siege of, by, and surrender to, the Jacobins, 1793, vii. 17-18; massacre of the Lyonnese, 18-19.
- Lytton, sir George, opposes the convention with Spain, v. 472; speaks against an amendment of the address for preventing parliamentary corruption, 519; chancellor of the exchequer, 1753, 139.
- Lytton, Thomas, lord, his claims to the authorship of Junius's Letters, vi. 111.

M

- MAAS, Dirk, a Dutch battle painter, v. 349.
- Macarthy, viscount Mountcashel; commands a force advancing against Ennis-killen; defeated 1689, iv. 482.
- Macauley, lord, low estimate of ancient Britain by, i. 16; his remarks on Pitt's policy in 1793, vii. 26; M.P. for Calne, 1830; his first speech in parliament, viii. 40; speaks in favour of reform, 75, 76, 81; dangers feared by, on the rejection of the Reform bill, 104; M.P. for Edinburgh; his speech on disloyal Tories, 252; his influence in causing the rejection of serjeant Talfourd's copy-right bill, 303; his plan, 304, 305; eloquence and powerful memory evinced by, as Guizot's cicerone in Westminster Abbey, 312; his mode of treating history, 312; his estimate of Hallam's "Constitutional History," 314; his speech on "the people's charter" presented by Duncombe, 342.
- MacCallum Mhor See Argyle, J. Campbell, duke of.
- Macclesfield, Thomas Parker, earl of, lord chancellor, impeached, 1725, for malversation in that office; he is found guilty, excluded from his office, and fined 30,000*l.*, v. 424; helps Chesterfield in carrying the bill for reforming the calendar through the Lords, 1751, 578.
- MacDonald of Boisdale, advises Charles Stuart to forego his insurrection designs, 1745, v. 504.
- MacDonald of Glencoe. See Glencoe.
- Macdonald of Keppoch, raises his clan, and joins Dundee in defeating Mackay at Killiecrankie, iv. 490; letters of fire and sword issued against 535; slain at Culloden, v. 555.
- MacDonald, of Kinloch Moidart, argues against the Pretender's plans, v. 504; joins his cause, 505.

- MacDonald, lady Margaret, aids the young Pretender in his escape from Skye, v. 504.
- Macdonald, general, defeated at Trebbia, 1799, vii. 134; and at Katsbach, 1813.
- MacDonald, Flora, aids prince Charles during his wanderings in the Highlands, 1746, v. 564.
- Macdonnell, colonel, his exploit at Waterloo, vii. 400.
- Machyn's "Diary of a Resident in London," notices from, ii. 626.
- MacIntosh, brigadier; commands a detachment sent to aid the southern insurrection, 375; escapes from Newgate, 384-385.
- MacIver survives the massacres after Culloden, v. 558.
- Mack, general, communicates secretly with Dumouriez, vi. 590; Austrian commander; surrenders 30,000 troops to Napoleon at Ulm, Oct. 20, 1805, iv. 207.
- Mackay, general, appointed to the command of the army in Scotland, iv. 491; his character, 491; marches upon Blair castle; is met by Dundee while advancing through the pass of Killiecrankie, and sustains a defeat, July 27, 1689, 482, 493; takes an active part in the capture of Athlone, June 30, 1691, 535; builds Fort William and fixes a garrison there under colonel Hill, 539; slain in the conflict at Steinkirk, Aug. 3, 1692, 167.
- Mackintosh, sir James, his remarks on Burke's opinions, vi. 500; his speech in defence of Peltier, 1803, vii. 178, 179; wrote the declaration for the Londoners, 184; takes up the advocacy of amendment in the criminal laws on the death of sir S. Romilly; moves for a select committee to consider this subject, 483, 484; opinion of, on the emancipation of the slaves, 598; results of his efforts for the repeal of capital punishments, 598; supports the bill for allowing counsel to prisoners, viii. 189.
- Maclean, colonel, repulses Arnold; saves Quebec, 1775, vi. 183; tenders Hastings's resignation of his governorship, vi. 431.
- MacNaghten, sir William, directs the affairs at Cabul, viii. 291; appointed governor of Bombay, 291; his conference with Akbar Khan, by whom he is massacred, 294.
- Macphedris, Captain John, his ill-treatment in the Fleet prison, v. 437.
- Macpherson, Cluny, demand of, on joining the Pretender, 1745, v. 438; his dash-ing bravery at Clifton, 542; keeps up a correspondence with Charles Edward, 571.
- Macquirk tried, and found guilty of murdering Mr. Clarke; pardoned, vi. 112, 113.
- Madison, James, president of the United States 1809-1817, vii. 637; viii. 638; his hostile message against England, vii. 364; proposes a repeal of the Embargo by the British, 377.
- Madras attacked and taken by the French, 1746, v. 593; restored to Britain, 593.
- Madrid, taken by the duke of Berwick, v. 197; entered by the allies, 1710, 239; and the French, 240; taken by the French, 1808, vii. 276; entered by Wellington, Aug. 1812, 337; occupied by the French, 1823, 584.
- Maate, revolt of, i. 42; suppressed, 42.
- Maestricht, surrendered to Kleber, 1794, vii. 50.
- Magdalen bridge, Oxford, built by Gwyn, vi. 382.
- Magdalen College. See Oxford.
- Magna Charta, proposed to John at Oxford by archbishop Langton and the earl of Pembroke, who rejects it, i. 383; signed by John at Runnymede, on June 15, 1215, 384; provisions of, 385, 386; effects of, upon the nation, 387, 388; provisions for the observance of, 389.
- Magnentius, revolt of, A. D. 350, i. 66.
- Maharajpooor, battle of, Dec. 29, 1843, viii. 361.
- Mahomed Ali, flies to Trichinopoly, v. 593; struggles against Chunda Sahib, 594.
- Mahon, lord, his plan for amending the copyright law, viii. 304; characteristics of his History of England, 315.
- Mahoni commands at Murviedro; deceived by Peterborough; arrested, v. 159.
- Mahratta wars, history of the, 1778-1782, vi. 433-435; and 1802-1805, 219-226.
- Mahrattas, peishwa of, concludes an alliance with Cornwallis, vi. 574; prepares to invade the British territories, viii. 625; surrenders to the British; abdicates his throne; becomes a pensioner of the East India Company, 626.
- Maida, battle of, July 4, 1806, vii. 241.
- Mail coaches, introduction of, 1784, vi. 394.
- Maillard leads the Parisian mob of 1789, vi. 486; president of the Assembly; his sentence of death on prisoners, 543.
- Maine, due de, receives an important command in the French army, v. 16; incompetent and cowardly, 16.
- Maitland, captain, Bonaparte surrendering to him, he conveys the ex-emperor to Plymouth, vii. 406.

- Malacca ceded to the British, 1824, vii. 627.
 Malaga, sea fight off, 1704, v. 152.
 Malcolm, king of Scotland, receives Edgar Atheling, i. 218; invades England, in 1070, and a marriage of, with Margaret, sister of Edgar, 223; civilization of Scotland promoted by Margaret, 228; unsuccessfully attacks William I., 251; killed, 251.
 Malcolm, king of Scotland, compelled to surrender Cumberland and Northumberland to Henry II. in 1157, i. 306.
 Malherbes, counsel for Louis XVI., 1792, vi. 567; guillotined, 1794, vii. 32.
 Malines submits to Marlborough, 1706, v. 174.
 Malmesbury, Harris, lord, British chargé des affaires at Madrid, 1770, vi. 142; minister at Berlin; his correspondence with the home government, 143; recommends that the proceedings against Portland be postponed, 561; sent on an especial mission to Berlin to purchase assistance by subsidy, 1793, vii. 47; appointed a negotiator to demand the princess Caroline of Brunswick for the prince of Wales, 55, 56; negotiates unsuccessfully for peace with France, 1796, 69; leaves Paris, Dec. 19; gives warning of a French expedition against Ireland, 71; appointed to negotiate for peace at Lisle, 1797, 85; the negotiations are put an end to by the revolution of the 18th Fructidor, 87; quotation from his diary, 192; remarks on the effect of the news of the Ulm surrender on Pitt, 207.
 Malplaquet, battle of, Sept. 11, 1709, v. 212-214.
 Malta taken by Bonaparte, 1798, vii. 97, 98; surrenders to the British after a two years' blockade, Sept. 1800, 149, 150; retained by the British, 181.
 Malthus advocates the adoption of savings' banks, vii. 445.
 Manchester, its population in Charles II.'s reign, and fifty years later, iv. 409; its men and manufactures, 410; the Blanket meeting at, 1817, vii. 457; the great reform meeting, 488; and massacre at, 492; obtains parliamentary representation, 1832, 114; population of, with Salford, in 1831, and 1861, 115.
 Manchester, earl of, as lord Kimbolton, accused with the five members of sedition by Charles I., iii. 426; commands at the second battle of Newbury, iii. 496; is accused of indecision and delay by Cromwell in parliament, 496.
 Mandat prepares to resist the insurrectionists of the 10th Aug., 1792; murdered, vi. 538.
 Manners, illustration of, 1709-1742, from Hogarth, v. 352-359; 1737-1783, vi. 390-426; 1784-1820, vii. 499, 501, 510, 516.
 Mansfield, William Murray, earl of, attorney-general; his interview with lord Kilmarnock, v. 561; becomes chief justice and lord Mansfield, 1756, vi. 21; declares Wilkes's outlawry null and void, 105; presides at Woodfall's prosecution, 117; chancellor of the exchequer 1767, 140; his house sacked, and its contents, including his valuable library, burnt by the Gordon rioters, 1780, 231; opposes the "contractors" and "revenue officers" bills, 268.
 Mantua besieged by the French, vii. 85-86; capitulates, Feb. 2, 1797, 86.
 Manufactures, list of articles with which foreigners were not allowed to compete, ii. 93.
 Mapes, Walter, satires of, on the state of the Church in the time of Henry II., i. 311.
 Mar, James Erskine, earl of, appointed secretary of state for Scotland, 1706, v. 366; deprived of his office; marries the duke of Kingston's daughter; organizes an insurrection in Scotland; inaugurates it by raising the Pretender's standard at Braemar, September 6, 1715, 367; his want of energy and action; debilitates the powers of the insurrectionists, 368; his movements cramped by the duke of Argyle; detaches a part of his army under MacIntosh; withdraws Argyle's attention from MacIntosh by a feint, 370; his indecisive march; halts at Sheriffmuir; receives a severe reverse in the conflict with Argyle, Nov. 13, 1715, 16; accompanies Charles in his flight to France, 380.
 Marat harangues the populace of Paris, 1789, vi. 481; desires to erect 800 gibbets, 502; advises that the royal palace be well watched, 512; aids in bringing about the September massacres, 1792, 544; denounces the moderation of Dumas, 589; excites the people to plunder the shops, 593; represents the executive power of France, 595; hates Robespierre, 596; assassinated by Charlotte Corday, July 13, 1793, 597.
 Marcus Antoninus; sends a number of Germans into Britain, i. 54.
 Marengo, battle of, June 14, 1800, vii. 149.
 Margaret, the heiress of Alexander III., of Scotland, dies in 1290, and leaves the succession to the crown in dispute, i. 456.
 Margaret of Anjou. See Henry VI.
 Margaret of Burgundy, sister to Edward IV., married in 1468, ii. 132; supports the pretensions of Lambert Simnel against Henry VII., 194; in 1492 protects Perkin Warbeck, 203; visited by Henry VIII. in 1513, 257.
 Maria Josepha of Austria, married Augustus III. of Poland; compelled by force

- to give up his state papers, vi. 19.
 Maria Louisa, archduchess of Austria, marries Bonaparte, vii. 303; gives birth to a son, March, 1811, 314; appointed regent of France, 354.
 Maria Theresa, daughter of Charles VI.; heiress of his states, v. 481; the English parliament grants a subsidy to, 482; marries Francis, grand duke of Tuscany; her claim disputed, 485; flies to Hungary; throws herself on the support of the Hungarians; the fortunes of her armies, 487; restores her conquests in Bavaria, 494; grieves at the loss of Silesia; joined by Louis XV., vi. 17; opposed to the partition of Poland, 143; empress of Germany, 1745-1762, 600.
 Marie Antoinette escapes from the mob, 1789, vi. 488; removed to Paris, 488; presents the dauphin to the people, 1790, 500; interview with Mirabeau, 503; accompanies Louis XVI. in his flight from Paris and capture, 512-514; her apparent calmness at the opera, 519; present at Louis's audience with the 20th June insurrectionists, 535; description of, at the attack on the Tuileries, August, 1792, 540; imprisoned in the Temple, 541; treatment pursued towards, 556, 557; guillotined, Oct. 16, 1793, vii. 26, 27.
 Marlborough, S. Churchill, duchess of, lady of the bedchamber to the princess Anne, her friendship for and large influence over the princess, iv. 499; urges her to obtain her increased income from the parliament, and not from the king, queen, v. 205; her account of the queen's political intrigues with Harley over the private audiences, 208; her income 9,500*l.* per annum, 209; her description of (Anne), 234, 235; her dismissal from Anne's service, 1711, 238; her revenge, 238; her meanness towards Vanbrugh, 341.
 Marlborough, duke of, John Churchill; an expedition against Ireland sails under his command, which disembarks near Cork, September, 22, 1690; takes Cork on the 29th, iv. 523; and Kinsale, 523; he is entrusted with the command of the English troops in Flanders, 534; offers to go over to James, 535; is dismissed from office by William, 537; in consequence of plotting for James's recall to the throne, 558; treachery of, in the Brest affair of 1694; offers William his services, which are refused, 592; implicated by Fenwick with holding treacherous correspondence with James II., v. 37; governor of the duke of Gloucester, 89; receives the order of the garter, and is made captain-general of Anne's forces, 1702, 112; he is sent as envoy extraordinary to the States-allied forces by the States; takes Venloo, September 18; Kuremonde, Stevens-wart, Liege, October 23, and the castle of Chartreuse, 115; an adventure, escape, to assist the Camisards, 121; takes Ulm, Bonn, Huy, 1703; proposes a grand design, but is thwarted by the States; takes Limbourg, 122, 123; his difficulty in recruiting the army, 131; Louis XIV. concentrates his forces upon Germany, 1704, 133; Marlborough plans a series of operations for opposing him, which he carries out in secrecy; marches to the Moselle, there gives Villeroi the slip, and pushes on to the Danube, 133, 134; his march along the Rhine; his attempt to detain; the high spirits of his army, 134; passes the Neckar, June 3, 135; meets prince Eugene on the 10th, and prince Louis of Baden, on the 13th, 135; army; description of the Schellenberg, 136; storms the Schellenberg in conjunction with prince Louis, July 2, 137; lays waste many villages in Bavaria, 439; camps at Friedberg, August 3; at Schonefeldt on the 10th; joins prince Eugene miles off, 141; marches upon their position, 141; attacks Tallard's headquarters at Blenheim, 142; which leads to a general conflict, 144; he gains the victory, August 13, 144; his anxiety to obtain sufficient food for his troops and prisoners, 147; Landau, which also capitulates, December; concludes treaties with Bavaria and Prussia; receives honours; arrives at the Hague, Dec. 16; embarks at Rotterdam on the 22nd and arrives at St. James's by the 26th, 147, 148; honours bestowed on, 148; enthusiastic reception; opposes the Conformity bill, 149; embarks at Harwich, March 31, 1705, 164; his plans are opposed by the Dutch; crosses the Moselle and Saar, June 3, 164; scarcity of food, and other disappointments, cause him to despond; rouses his spirits, joins d'Anvers, 147; regains possession of Huy, July 11, 165; forces the French lines, July 17, by the Dutch generals, 167, 168; the first stone of his palace at Woodstock laid, 168; opposes jobbery; arrives at the Hague, April 27, 1703, 170, 171; his confidence of victory; advances to give battle to the French, 171, 172; the battle commences; he is nearly made prisoner; the village of Ramillies is seized by his forces; gains the victory of Ramillies, 173, 174; Antwerp, Ghent, Bruges, and Oudenarde surrender; Ostend is besieged; capitulates July 7; Menin captured,

August 22; Dendermonde surrenders, Sept. 5; Ath falls October 4; he returns to England, 174; 175: his pension of 5,000*l.* per annum settled upon his posterity, 196; visits Charles XII. at Alt Ranstadt, April 27, 1707; and diplomatizes with him, 198; accomplishes little in his campaign in the Netherlands; plans an attack upon France, 199; prepares to attack the French before Oudenarde; is joined by prince Eugene; and attacked by fever brought on by long marches and disappointments, 1708, 204; defeats the French at Oudenarde, July 11; his description of the battle, 205, 206; besieges Lille, 207; his disgust at the queen's temper; he is on the point of retiring from business, 208, 209; his yearly income nearly 55,000*l.*; covers the siege of Lille; his meanness towards Webb, 209, 210; urges upon Godolphin the necessity of another campaign, 212; and attempt to reduce France to accept unmilitary terms; rouses the French national spirit, surrender of Tournay, 212, 213, gains a victory at Malplaquet, September 11, 1709, 213; represents England at the conferences of Gertruydenberg, 1710, 233; his despondency at the state of affairs, 233; mortified at the dismissal of his Whig friends and relations from office, 235; returns to London, December; coldness of the queen, 237; and opposition of Harley and St. John towards him, 237, 238; sinister motives imputed to him; his wife dismissed from Anne's service, 238; hostility shown towards, 241; leaves London, March 4, 1711, to assume his command in the Netherlands, 241; his terror of the press, 249; forces the French lines with an inferior force, 251; invests and takes Bouchain, 252; his successes disparaged by the press; he writhes under their attacks, 252; lauds at Greenwich on his return home, Nov. 17, 253; his answer to the queen's speech insinuating his desire for prolonging war, 253, 254; he is still opposed by Harley and the ministry; is turned out of all his offices by the queen, Dec. 31, 255; his avariciousness; charged with illegally taking public moneys; his defence thereof, 255, 256; his resignation in adversity, 266; his name omitted in the regency list, 361, 363; retains his office of captain-general and master of the ordnance, 363; death of, 1722, 416.

Marborough, duke of, resigns his military commission, 1743 v. 442; commands the troops sent against Cherbourg and St. Maloes, 1758, vi. 39.

Marborough House built by Wren, v. 340.

Marbont, marshal, appointed to command 20,000 men to be sent against England, 1805, vii. 205; commands the army of Holland, 206; weakens the garrison of Ciudad Rodrigo, advances to its relief, 330; commander of the French army in Spain, 1811; his manoeuvres near Salamanca, 334, 335; a fault he commits is taken advantage of by Wellington, which results in the battle of Salamanca, July 22, in which he is wounded and defeated, 335, 336; Napoleon's rage against, 337; commands the forces in Paris, 1830, viii. 48; ordered to act against the July revolutionists; the struggle of July 28, 50; he is besieged in the Tuileries and compelled to give in, 51.

Marriage act, 1753, vi. 585-587.

Marriage act, Royal, vi. 149-152.

Marriages bill, regulation of Dissenters', 1836, viii. 192.

Marsellais, their arrival in Paris, July 30, 1792, vi. 536; they assemble before Danton's club, 538; their contest at the Tuileries, 539, 540.

Marshalsea prison, the horrors of the, v. 438.

Marsiglia, defeat of the duke of Savoy at, 1693, iv. 583.

Marsin, general, commands a division of the French army at the battle of Blenheim, v. 140-143; joins his army with that of Villars 1705, 164.

Marston Moor, battle of, July 2, 1644, iii. 494.

Martignac, M. de, French minister; character of his policy, viii. 43.

Martineau, Harriet, success and objects of her political-economy tales, viii. 321, 322.

Martinique surrendered to the British, 1762, vi. 66.

Mary, queen of England, born 1516, refuses to acknowledge the validity of her mother's divorce, ii. 387; refuses to accede to Edward's request to forbear the use of the mass, 565; bold letter of, to Edward VI., 566; addresses a letter to the council on the death of her brother, and claims the crown, 575; is joined at Kenninghall by numerous adherents, 576; is proclaimed in London, 579; triumphant arrival of, in London, 580; Northumberland is tried and executed for treason, 580; causes of her being so joyfully received by the people, 582; the coronation of, 583; description of her person, 584; meets her first parliament, and passes an Act for repealing certain treasons, and the penalties for denying the king's supremacy, 584; repeal of Acts of Edward VI. relating to religion, 585; projected marriage of, to Philip of Spain, and dissatisfaction of the people, 586; arrival of ambassadors to arrange terms, 587; insurrection of sir Thomas Wyatt against the marriage, 588; courage and address shown by Mary on the occasion, 589; the population of London arm in her behalf, 590; Wyatt is defeated, 592; lord Guilford Dudley and lady Jane Grey beheaded, 594; execution of Suffolk and numerous others, 595; trial and acquittal of sir Nicholas

Throckmorton, 595; the jury committed to prison, 596; execution of Wyatt, 598; letter of Elizabeth sent for to court, 597; is committed to the Tower, execution, 599; quiet condition of the country, 600; fiery zeal of Gardiner to suppress the Reformation, 600; the married clergy expelled from their livings, 601; Cranmer, Latimer, and Ridley condemned as heretics at Oxford, 601; arrival of Philip of Spain, 602; marriage of, with Philip, and pageantry on the occasion, 602; bribery exercised by Philip, 601; arrival in England of cardinal Pole, 605; he absolves the realm, 605; submission of the parliament on the papal see, 606; the statutes against heretics revived, 607; the Marian persecution, 608; list of Protestant victims, 609; cardinal Pole exhorts to piety, but gives a commission to Gardiner, Bonner, and others, to deal with heretics then in prison, 610; encouragement of the spy-system for the discovery of heresy, 622; Philip leaves England, 627; discontent of Mary at the discovery, 629; Dr. Dee in trouble for casting the nativities of the queen and the princess Elizabeth, 630; the Dudley conspiracy for robbing the queen and conspirators, 631; Elizabeth suspected of participation, and her letter to the queen, 632; cardinal Pole created archbishop of Canterbury, 632; his moderation in winning the battle of St. Quentin, 634; the English forces assist in winning the battle of St. Quentin, 634; Calais besieged and taken by the French, on Jan. 7, 1558, 636; Guisnes and Hammes taken, and the English wholly expelled from France, 638; her last illness and death, on Nov. 17, 1558, 640.

Mary, daughter of James II., marries the prince of Orange, in 1677, iv. 232; proclaimed queen with William, 375; coronation of, with her husband, April 11, 1689, 473; asks the princess Anne what she means by applying to parliament to increase her income, 48; appointed regent in William's absence, 507; her energetic conduct in retrieving the disaster Beachey Head, June, 1690, 515; quarrels with her sister Anne, 557; addresses a dispatch to the commanders of the fleet; enthusiasm caused on its being read, 561; joins in the national gratitude by making a gift of the royal palace of Greenwich as an asylum for the disabled mariners of England, 563; issues proclamations for the discovery of seditious libellers, and for the apprehension of highwaymen, 569; her reply taken dangerously ill at Kensington, 583; her conduct highly praised by William, in her 33rd year; her character and burial, 591.

Mary, queen of Scotland, born Dec. 7, 1542, ii. 410; Henry VIII. negotiates a marriage between her and his son Edward, 440; the project defeated by the queen-mother and cardinal Beaton, 449; the duke of Somerset endeavours to enforce the treaty, 523; is contracted in marriage to the dauphin of France, 530; the marriage solemnized in Paris, in 1558, 635; becomes queen of France on the accession of her husband Francis II., in 1559, iii. 23; assumes the royal arms of England, 24; refuses to ratify the treaty of Edinburgh in 1560, 31; an- nounces to Throckmorton on being urged to sign it, 32; her husband, Francis II., dies, Dec. 6, 1560, 32; lord James Murray sent as ambassador to request her return to Scotland, 35; policy of, towards Elizabeth, 31; indignation of, at being refused a safe-conduct, 35; imprudent avowal of her hatred of John Knox, 36; farewell of, to France, 37; arrival and reception of, in Scotland, Aug. 19, 1561, 38; contrasted with Elizabeth, 38, 39; summons Knox before her for preaching against her marriage with a papist, prince, 45; writes to the Council of Trent, that if she succeeded to the throne of England she would bring both kingdoms under the apostolic see, 45; lord Robert Dudley recom- mended as a husband by Elizabeth, 45; continued efforts of, to be declared successor to the crown of England, 46, et seq.; marries Henry, lord Darnley, July 29, 1565, 47; Murray revolts unsuccessfully, and takes refuge in England, 48; discontent of the reforming nobles at the marriage, 50, 51; suppresses the revolt, and banishes the insurgent lords, 51; rise of Riccio, 51; joins the league of Catherine de Medici and the duke of Alva for the extermination of Protest- antism in Europe, 52; jealousy of Darnley, 53; quarrels with the queen, and un- successful efforts, 53; murder of Riccio, 53; described by the English am- bassadors, 53; gives birth to a son, June 19, 1566, 57; amicable relations with England established, and Elizabeth becomes godmother to James, 57; Bothwell becomes Mary's adviser, and Elizabeth becomes godmother to James, 57; Bothwell ed to Kirk of Field, near Edinburgh, 59; the house is blown up, and Darnley murdered, 61; undoubted guilt of Bothwell, 60; his mock-trial, and acquittal, 62; is carried off by pretended force by Bothwell, 63; and is married to him, 63; the nobles revolt against the marriage, and she surrenders to them at Carberry Hill, on June 18, 1567, 64; carried prisoner to Lochleven, 61; is compelled to abdicate on July 24, in favour of her son, James VI., 66; Murray is proclaimed regent, 67; question as to the authenticity of the letters to Bothwell attributed to her, 68; escapes from Lochleven, 68; romantic circumstances of, 69; assembles forces, fights, and loses, the battle of Langsyde, May 16, 1568, 71; takes refuge in England, 71; question as to the justice of her detention, 73; is removed to Bolton Castle, and is indignant at being considered a prisoner, 74; conference appointed to hear the charges against her, 74; proceedings of the conferences at York and London, 75; placed under the care of the earl Shrewsbury, 76; project for the marriage of, to the duke of Norfolk, 78; is removed from Tutbury Castle to Coventry, 79; intrigues of Philip of Spain and the Roman Catholics in favour of, 85; plan for giving her up to her own subjects to be punished, 96; insecurity of, 96; alleged complicity of, in Babington's conspiracy, 109; is transferred to Fotheringay, and her papers are seized, 110; a commission issued for her trial at Fotheringay, 113; proceedings on the trial, 114, 115; and judgment against, 116; conflicting opinions on the judgment, 118; proclamation is made of the judgment, and she is excluded from all claim to the crown of England, 119; the warrant of execution is issued, 121; is refused a confessor, 123; is beheaded at Fotheringay, on Feb. 8, 1587, 125.

Marlybone church, built by Hardwick, vii. 537.

Masham, Mrs., becomes a favourite of queen Anne's 1708, v. 205; contrives a secret correspondence between Anne and Mr. Harley, 268; obtains the ascendancy in queen Anne's confidence, 235; keeper of the privy purse, 1711, 238.

Massachusetts Bay government regulation bill passed, 1774, vi. 158.

Massacres of September, 1792, in Paris, vi. 542-546.

Massena, Andrew, barbarity of, v. 139; a general in Bonaparte's army, vii. 64; commands the French sent to pillage Berne, 1798; obtains a large share of the booty, 96; baffled in driving the English out of Portugal, 1810, 309, 311; Almeida surrenders to, Aug. 16, 310; loses the battle of Busaco, Sept. 27, 310, 311; sufferings of his army, 310; retreats into Spain, 318.

Matilda, daughter of Henry I., married in 1114 to the emperor of Germany, i. 271; becomes a widow in 1124, 273; named successor to the crown of England in 1126, 273; marries Fulk, earl of Anjou, in 1127, 273; her son Henry born in 1133, 274; arrives in England to assert her claim to the crown, 288; is besieged in Arundel Castle, but allowed by Stephen to join the earl of Gloucester at Bristol, 289; after the battle of Lincoln, is proclaimed queen in 1141, 291; revolt of the Londoners against, 292; escapes to Devizes, 294; besieged in Oxford, and escapes, 296; leaves England, 297.

Mauritius acquired by the English, 1810, vii. 622.

Maur, abbé, advocates for the proprietary rights of the clergy, vi. 495.

Maximilian, the emperor, concludes a treaty with Henry VIII. against Louis XII. of France, ii. 255; takes military service under Henry, 256; leads the charge at the Battle of Spurs, 256; dies 1519, 262.

Maximus, assists Theodosius in repulsing the Picts and Scots in their invasion of Britain, i. 67; proclaimed emperor of Britain, 67; leads a British army into Gaul, is defeated, and put to death, A.D. 388, 67.

Mayence surrenders to the king of Prussia, July 22, 1793, vii. 14.

Maynooth College, grant to, proposed, viii. 383; stormy debate on the measure, 383, 384; finally carried, 385.

Meadows, general, commands the British army in the Carnatic, vi. 574; takes Severndroog and Oetradroog, 575.

Meane, battle of, Feb. 17, 1843, viii. 359, 360.

Mechanics' Institution of London inaugurated by Dr. Birkbeck, 1823, viii. 20, 21.

Meehudpore, battle of, Dec. 21, 1817, viii. 626.

Meer Cossein. See Cossein.

Meer Jaffier. See Jaffier.

Mehemet Ali, pasha of Egypt, invades Syria, thereby involving himself in war with Mahmoud; his successes and aggrandizing views, viii. 262; compelled to submit to the terms proposed by Britain, 269.

Melas, general, drives back Moreau, vii. 134; drives the French from Nice; prepares to battle Bonaparte; defeated at Marengo, June, 1800; concludes an armistice, 149.

Melbourne, W. Lamb, viscount, chief secretary for Ireland, 1828, viii. 16; resigned the same year, 23; home secretary, 67; speech in the debate on secondary punishments, 133; his difficulty in forming a ministry according to the king's plan; ultimate formation of his ministry, 1834, 163; sudden dismissal, 166; ostensible cause of his dismissal, 167, 168; not brought about by any act of the ministry, 169; his amendment on the address from his ministry, 176; his reply, 1835, 176, 203; exclusion of lord Brougham from his ministry, 176; his reply to lord Lyndhurst's hostile speech, 187; denies having made a compact with the O'Connell party, 187; his eulogy on William IV., 199; first lord of the treasury, 231; proposes the suspension of the Jamaica constitution for five years; his proposition carried, 250; his ministry resigns, but again returns to Melcombe. See Doddington.

Melfort, earl of, his letters to Balcarres intercepted and read before the Convention, iv. 488.

Melrose Abbey, foundation of, i. 285.

Melville, Henry Dundas, lord; lord advocate of Scotland; supports the opposition party, vi. 260; declares that lord Chatham never advocated reform, 269; supports Pitt, 444; opposes the hostile motion against the ministry, 1784, 445; recalls earl Gower, the ambassador at Paris, 541; urges Loughborough to demur as to taking the great seal, 561; secretary of state; delivers the king's message about seditious practices to the Commons, vii. 34; praises the king's humanity shown at Howe's victory, 1794, 43; his conference with the king on the Catholic question, and the Coronation oath, 153; succeeded with the king on taryship by lord Hobart, 155; first lord of the admiralty, 200, 552; implicated on a charge of tampering with the public money; vote of censure passed against him; resigns, 1805, vii. 201; progress of the motion for impeaching him, 201, 202; his acquittal, June 12, 1806, 230; home secretary, 1791-1794; war and colonial secretary, 1794-1801, 639; retires from the admiralty, 1791-1794; war Menai suspension bridge built by Telford, vii. 537.

Mendicity of London in 1815, 1816, vii. 440, 441.

Menin taken by Marlborough, Aug. 22, 1706, v. 174.

Menou, general-in-chief of the interior; unable to suppress the Lepelletier section revolt, 1795, vii. 59, 60; superseded by Barras, 59; succeeds Kleber in the command of the French army in Egypt, 161; his charge at the British, 1801; beaten back by the Highlanders, 163.

Methodism, rise of; its professors produce a reformation in the English manners, vi. 425; characters of its leaders and originators; Whitefield and Wesley, 425, 426; Wesleyism, 425; the Cambuslang conversions, 426.

Methuen, British ambassador at the Portuguese court, concludes the Methuen treaty, v. 123; his account of the battle of Almanza, 197; secretary of state, 1716, 393; resigns, 394.

Methuen treaty, terms of the, with Portugal, 1703, v. 123, 264; annulled, 1835, viii. 205.

Milan entered by the French, 1796, vii. 65.

Milan decree issued by Bonaparte, Dec. 1807, vii. 264, 642.

Militia bill passed, 1756, vi. 22.

Miller, J., a printer. See Onslow, colonel.

Milton, John, embodiment of early English legends by, i. 14; his description of "London at the commencement of the Civil War, iii. 440; publishes his "Iconoclastes," in reply to the "Icon Basiliké," 587; appointed Latin secretary to the Council of State, 590; his death, and warning of, against slavery, iv. 229. See Addison, v. 288.

Minden, battle of, Aug. 1, 1759, vi. 43.

Mines. See copper, coal, lead, tin, &c.

Mines in Britain, under the Romans, notice of, i. 47; remains of iron works yet existing, 48.

Minorca taken by the English, 1708, v. 207; surrendered to the French, 1756, vi. 15, 16; restored to England, 1763, 68, 261; surrendered to the French, 1782, 261; ceded to Spain by Great Britain, 290.

Minto, lord, governor-general of India, vii. 620; quells the mutiny at Madras and other places, 621, 622; acquisition of the eastern archipelago; other acts of his administration, 623; resigns, 1813, 623; first lord of the admiralty, viii. 203.

Mirabeau, comte de, bold speech of, at a meeting of the National Assembly, 1789, vi. 477; moves for an address to the king for the removal of the troops, 478; prevents the National Assembly from assuming the power to declare war, 499; named president of the National Assembly, Jan. 1791, endeavours to secure order, and curb violent measures, 502; negotiates with Marie Antoinette; his services paid for by Louis, 503; his character and unwearied energy, 502; death of, April 2, 1791; burial at the Pantheon; disinterred, 1793, 504; advocates the king's veto, 520.

Moir, lord, his severe measures towards deserters, vi. 236; gains a battle near Camden, 249; sets out to aid the Vendéans, but arrives too late, vii. 30; governor-general of India, Oct. 4, 1813, 623; obtains permission to war against the Phidarees on a large scale, 625; the campaign, 625, 626; breaks up the Mahratta confederacy, 626; rules issued by, for regulating the newspaper press in India, 633.

Molesworth, sir William, remarks of, on Canadian affairs, viii. 233.

Molwitz, battle of, April 10, 1741, v. 486.

- Mona (Anglesey), the isle of, taken by Suetonius, i. 33.
- Monastic establishments, magnificence and riches of, temp. Hen. VII., ii. 232.
- Money, value of, in the reigns of Henry III. and Edward I., i. 408; scarcity of, during the wars of the Roses, ii. 77; labourers to be paid in, and truck forbidden by statute in 1465, 83; money prices of clothing in 1450-1485, 91; debasement of the coin in 1464, 129; altered value of, in 1547, 471; debasement of coin by Henry VIII. and Edward VI., 490-494; rise of prices, occasioned by the influx of the precious metals, iii. 204; a debased brass coinage issued by James II. in 1689, iv. 496; depreciated state of coinage in 1695, v. 20, 21; guineas rise to thirty shillings apiece, 21; extensive circulation of clipped, 21; a new coinage issued, and the old collected by government in payment of taxes, 22, 23; remarkable scarcity of, 1696, 33, 34; the government refuses to reduce the proper standard of; the currency of the new coinage established, 36; want of, caused by the South Sea scheme, 411; Wood's copper coinage for Ireland; Swift's letters causes the patent to be withdrawn, 420, 422; depreciation of the American currency, 1779, vi. 220; suspension of cash payments by the Bank of England, Feb. 1797, vii. 73, 74; currency of cash almost superseded by that of paper, 74; the panic in 1797; funds fall to 47, 84; reduction in the circulating medium, and rise in the value of, 430; state of the currency 1816, 483, 484; the panic of 1825, 600, 606; the panic of 1847, viii. 415, 416.
- Monk, George (duke of Albemarle), left by Cromwell to manage affairs in Scotland, iii. 618; conduct of, in Scotland, iv. 112; Charles endeavours to engage him on his side, 112; resolves to restore the parliament, 113; sends commissioners to London to negotiate with the army, 113; marches to London, 116; is employed by the parliament to quell the disaffection in the city, 118; causes the secluded members to be restored, 120; promises sir A. Haslerig to oppose the setting-up of Charles Stuart as king, 120; agrees to act for Charles, 159; suppresses the insurrection of Lambert, 124; receives the king on his landing at Dover, 130; produces private letters from the marquis of Argyll to procure his conviction, 154; appointed to the command of the fleet against the Dutch with prince Rupert, 174; meets their superior fleet unexpectedly, but fights obstinately for four days, 175; ravages the Dutch coast, 178; commands the forces sent against the duke of Monmouth in 1685, but is forced to retreat, 309.
- Monkton, general, falls in attacking Quebec, vi. 47.
- Monmouth, duke of, connives at the mutilation of sir John Coventry, iv. 212; pretensions of, to legitimacy, 247; marriage of, to the duchess of Buccleugh, 247; the king solemnly affirms his legitimacy, 248; is sent to take the command of the army against the Covenanters, 257; defeats them at Bothwell Bridge on June 22, 1679, 258; returns suddenly to England to attend the sick-bed of Charles, and is considered as a rival for the crown, 266; is sent to Flanders, 260; returns to England and is received with great joy, 261; is made by the Whigs the Protestant candidate for the crown, 266; his triumphant progress in the west of England, 266; dissatisfaction of, at the acquittal of Count Königsmark for the murder of Thynne, 284; accused of a participation in the Rye House Plot in 1683, 284; he escapes, 285; is pardoned, 289; lands at Lyme in 1685, 306; publishes a declaration against James II., 307; is very favourably received at Taunton, 309; proclaims himself king, 309; marches to Bristol, 310; fails in receiving support, and retreats, 311; skirmish at Philip's-Norton, 311; battle of Sedgemoor, 313; flight and capture of, 314; abject behaviour of, in his interview with James, 315; execution of, 316; considered by the people as a martyr for the Protestant religion, 316.
- Monnet, gen., commander of Flushing; cuts dykes to drive away the British, 1809, vii. 294.
- Mons besieged and taken by the French, 1691, iv. 530.
- Monson, col., a member of the council at Calcutta, opposes Hastings, vi. 429; his death, 431.
- Montague, Charles. See Halifax, earl of.
- Montcalm, marquis de, commander of the French troops in Canada, 1759, vi. 45, 46; attacks Wolfe on the heights of Abraham, Sept. 13; defeated, 47; and mortally wounded; died Sept. 14, 47.
- Montenotte, battle of, April 12, 1796, vii. 65.
- Monte Video. See Auchmuty, vii. 252.
- Montfort, Jane de, heroic defence of the Castle of Hennebon, i. 506; is relieved by sir Walter Manny, 506.
- Montfort, Simon de, earl of Leicester, attends the parliament at Westminster, in 1258, i. 411; nominated head of the council, 412; is forced to withdraw to France, 412; character of, 413; returns to England and a civil war takes place, 414; wins the battle of Lewes, and takes Henry III. prisoner, 415; burgesses summoned to parliament in 1264 by, 416; is defeated and slain at the battle of Evesham, 418; prohibition of holding him for a saint, 419; continued resistance offered by his sons, who murder the nephew of Henry, 420.

- Montgomery, Richard, general in the American army, invades Canada, 1775; killed in an attack upon Quebec, Dec. 31, vi. 183.
- Montjuich. See Peterborough.
- Montrevel, marshal de, unable to subdue the Camisards, 1703; superseded by marshal Villars, v. 121.
- Montrose, James Graham, marquis of, victories of, in Scotland in 1645, iii. 500; influence of his letter containing an account of these victories upon Charles I., 500; advice of, to Charles I., 501; defeats the Covenanting army under Baillie, 513; defeated at Philiphaugh by Lesley, 513; counsels Charles II. to win his kingdom by battle, 596; who gives him a commission to go so, 593; lands in the Orkneys, March, 1650, 607; defeated by colonel Strachan at Craigchonichen, 607; wanders among the Highlands, and is taken on May 3, 607; exultation of the Covenanters at his capture, 607; sentenced to death, 607; ill-treatment of, at Edinburgh, 608; conduct of, before parliament, and at his execution, 608; character of, by Clarendon, 609.
- Montserrat taken by the French, vi. 260; restored to England, 290.
- Moore, sir John, takes Wexford, June 21, 1798, vii. 113; appointed to command 11,000 men in the Peninsula; his mortification at being made subordinate to sir H. Dalrymple, and sir H. Burrard, 271; commences his march into Spain, Oct. 1808; his progress through the country to Sahagun; commences a retreat; pursued by Napoleon, Dec. 24, 276; halts at Lugo, 277; marches to Corunna; defeat of the French there, Jan. 16, 1809; death of, 278; his burial, 279; opinions on his retreat, 280; sufferings of his army, 280.
- Morcar and Edwin, insurrection of, suppressed by William the Conqueror, i. 218; join Hereward, and death of Edwin, 226; imprisonment of Morcar, 227.
- Mordaunt, sir John, has joint command of the Rochefort expedition, 227.
- More, Hannah, rejoices at the fall of the Bastille, vi. 492; her writings, vii. 512.
- More, sir Thomas, unsuccessfully attempts to prevent the riot on "Evil May Day," in 1517, ii. 281; is chosen speaker of the House of Commons in 1523, 283; is created lord chancellor in 1529, and speaks harshly against Wolsey, 317; opposes the doctrines of the Reformers, 318; lays before parliament the opinion of the universities in favour of Henry's divorce, but is himself against it, 326; retires from the Chancellorship, 336; doubts whether he sanctioned the burning of John Baynham in May, 1532, 337; official character of, 337; implicated in the charge of conspiracy against the king with the Holy Maid of Kent, 332; is committed to the Tower with Fisher, bishop of Rochester, for refusing to swear to the illegality of the king's first marriage, 336; tried for treason, convicted, and executed on July 6, 1535, 362-364.
- Moreau, J. V., serves in Jourdan's army, vii. 49; appointed to command the army of the Rhine and the Moselle, 1796, 63; failure of his campaign, 68; his retreat through the Black Forest to Strasbourg, 68; beaten back by gen. Melas; defeated, 1799, 134; campaign of, in Germany, 1800, 149; victory of Hohenlinden gained by, Dec. 3, 150; conspires against Bonaparte, 1804; exiled, 193; takes part in the battle of Dresden against Napoleon, in which he is wounded; death of, 347.
- Morgan, gen., defeats Tarleton at Cowpens, Jan. 17, 1781, vi. 248; joins his forces with Greene's, 248.
- Morland, George, the representative of his day in animal painting, vii. 548.
- Mornington, earl of. See Wellesley, marquess of.
- Morpeth, lord, his eulogy on Francis Horner, 1817, vii. 472; votes for Sutton as speaker of the House of Commons, 1833, viii. 127; moves an amendment for reform in the address, 1835, 172; secretary for Ireland, 203.
- Mortemart, duke de, his audience with Charles X., promises extorted by, from the king, 1830, viii. 51, 52.
- Mortimer, Roger. See Edward II. and Edward III.
- Morimain, statute of, passed, 7 Edw. I., i. 428.
- Moscow, entry of the French into, Sept. 14, 1812, vii. 340; the conflagration of; evacuated by the French, Oct. 19, 342.
- Mounier, president of the French Assembly, vi. 487; obtains the king's consent to the articles of the constitution, 487.
- Mountcashel, viscount. See Macarthy.
- Mountfort, William, a player, murder of, by Hill, iv. 576.
- Mountjoy, lord, sent by Tyrconnel on a mission to James II. at St. Germain; on his arrival there he was put into the Bastille, iv. 475.
- Mourad Bey heads the Mamlouks; defeated by the French at the Battle of the Pyramids, 1798, vii. 99.
- Muir, Thomas, sentenced to transportation for advocating a reform in the representation of the people, 1794, vii. 33.
- Municipal corporation reform, viii. 178-184; report of the commission of inquiry showing the generally corrupt state of the corporations, 179-181; passing of lord