

Priapism in children is often due to stone in the bladder, tight prepuce, worms in the rectum, etc. Extreme cases are on record where priapism has terminated in gangrene of the penis.

Treatment.—Priapism usually gets well under hygienic and symptomatic treatment, beyond which no special measures can be suggested, except irritating the lower part of the spine, blistering the perineum, an india-rubber seton at the nucha, possibly the use of electricity, and strychnin, ergot, bromid of potassium tentatively, notably in cantharidal priapism. Iodid of potassium has been successfully used.
