DERIVATION.

I. DERIVATION OF NOUNS.

Nouns are derived from adjectives, from verbs, from nouns, and from participles.

1st. From adjectives, by adding ness, as in Lessons 80, 82, 83, 84, 85, etc. : — by adding ity, as in Lessons 108, 109, and 124 : — by changing t or te into ce or cy, as in Lessons 114, 115, 123, 127, etc. ; or by adding ship, dom, hood, ard, ist, etc.

2d. From verbs, by adding ment, as in Lessons 93, 97, 122, etc. : — by changing the termination of the verb into ion, sion, or ation, as in Lessons 97, 98, and 112 : — by adding ance, al, ure, age, er, or or, etc., as in Lessons 100 and 111.

3d. From nouns, by adding y, ship, ist, ude, et, etc., as in Lessons 95 and 128 ; or by adding dom, rick, wick, or ate, hood, ian, let, etc.

4th. From participles in ing, — the nouns being the same in form as the participles, and only distinguished from them by the construction of the sentence.

II. DERIVATION OF ADJECTIVES.

Adjectives are derived from nouns, from verbs, from adjectives, and from participles.

1st. From nouns, by adding y or ly, as in Lessons 81, 82, 83, and 84 : — by adding ful, less, ish, ive, ed, as in Lessons 87 and 89 : — by adding ous, some, al, ine, ate, as in Lessons 104 and 107 : — or by adding en, ic, able, or ible, etc.

2d. From verbs, by adding able or ible, as in Lessons 101, 133, and 155 : — or by adding ive or ory, as in Lessons 112, 117, 119, 139, etc.

3d. From adjectives, by adding ish or some ; — in a few cases by adding y or ly ; or by prefixing dis, in, un, or il, — as on page 115.

4th. From participles, by prefixing un, and by using the participle as an adjective, as on page 115.

III. DERIVATION OF VERBS.

Verbs are derived from nouns, from adjectives, and from verbs.

1st. From nouns, by adding ise, ize, en, or ate.

2d. From adjectives, by adding en, as in Lesson 86 ; — by adding ate or ize ; or by using adjectives as verbs.

3d. From verbs, by prefixing a, be, dis, for, fore, mis, over, out, under, up, or with.

IV. DERIVATION OF ADVERBS.

1st. Many adverbs are derived from adjectives by adding ly, as shown in Lessons 80, 85, 87, 88 ; — and so throughout the book. A few adverbs in ly are derived from nouns.

2d. There are many compound adverbs ; as, here-in, to-day ; — and about seventy are formed by means of the prefix a ; as, a-broad, a-way, a-go, etc.

Conjunctions and prepositions are very irregular in their derivation.

Note. A very few compound words, — such as press-man, fish-man, head-most, etc., have been introduced, in the Lessons, with the derivatives.

We would suggest here, that pupils should be allowed the aid of a Dictionary, if they need one, in writing out their Exercises. Those not sufficiently advanced to write them should read aloud the printed Exercises, and designate the parts of speech, etc.

sŏn, ôr, dŏ, wŏlf, tŏŏ, tŏŏk, ūrn, rŭde, pŭll ; ç, è, soft ; c, ĝ, hard ; aŝ, ŝure, aŝger, this

THIRD SERIES OF AFFIXES.

Let pupils write out the Lessons in full.

Explanations. Nouns are in ROMAN SMALL CAPITALS; Adjectives in ITALIC SMALL CAPITALS; Verbs in Roman full face; and Adverbs in Italic full face. In the Exercises, Participles are in Italic small capitals, beginning with an Italic capital. The Italics a. n. v., etc., after a word, denote the several parts of speech to which it belongs.

The signs of the participial affixes ($\frac{1}{2}$), connected with words that are printed either as nouns or as adjectives, show that the words are used as verbs also. In the following Lessons these signs are joined to the verb without any intervening dash, where there is no other affix to be joined to the same verb. Thus: $\acute{O}X' Y \acute{G}EN, -\acute{I}Z\frac{1}{2}$, $\acute{A}te, -\frac{1}{2}$, $\acute{I}ON$.

Note. When a series of English derivatives have a common root, and that root is derived from a Latin or a Greek word, a knowledge of this primary will often be found a great aid to a correct understanding of its English derivatives. Hence we have designated many of these primaries in the subsequent part of this work, that the teacher may embrace them in the Exercises in Derivation, if he think best. But even if no direct use be thus made of them, we think they will be likely to benefit some of the more enquiring pupils, — sufficiently, at least, to compensate for the little space they occupy.

DERIVATION. Latin. a, le gālis, legal, from lex, law. b, līn'guā, the tongue. c, mōr'bus, disease. d, nā'tang, swimming. e, sāp'i'dus, savory, from sāp'e're, to taste. f, scīl'r'q, a buffoon. g, stāb'i'lis, from stā're, to stand. h, ta cē're, to be silent. i, tēch'ne (Greek), an art. j, vī'tū, life. k, nŏ'vus, new. l, rēg, a thing. m, q'vis, a citizen. n, lŏ'eus, a place.

DERIVATION. a, dē'mon, an evil spirit; dai'mōn (Greek), a divinity. b, du rā're, to endure (Eng., dure, obsolete). c, fāb'u la, a feigned story. d, jūs, jū'ris, right; jū rā're, to swear. e, Laz'a rus, the leprous beggar. f, quad rans, a fourth part, from quāt'u or, four. g, schō'la, a school. h, sōph'os, wise. i, trāns, across, and ī're, to go. j, dēns, a tooth, and fri cā're, to rub. k, lē'nis, soft, mild. l, lē'vis, light in weight. m, vēr'us, true. n, Greek, ēp'ī, upon, and tāph'os, a tomb. (Show how the idea of right, or justice, runs through all the words connected with jury.)

EXERCISE 71. Some came forth raving with DE MŌ' NĪ AC frenzy, and others with DE MŌ' NĪ AC laughter. He was kept in DŪR' ANĖ vile. "Soon shall have passed our human DŪ RĀ' TION." It is a material of great DU RĀ BĪL' I TY. He was a fine SĠHŌL' AR of SĠHŌL' AR LY habits, when he came from SĠHŌOL, where he had been schooled in all SĠHO LĀS' TIC accomplishments.
