

THE
HISTORY OF
MODERN EUROPE,
FROM 1763,
BEING A CONTINUATION OF
D^r. RUSSELL'S HISTORY,
BY W^m. JONES,
AUTHOR OF THE HISTORY OF THE WALDENSES, &c. &c.

Pruthorne Sc.

NEW YORK
Harper & Brothers, 82 Cliff St.
1834

DIOZ
RS

1080043327

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW-YORK, ss.

BE IT REMEMBERED, That on the 30th day of September, A. D. 1830, in the fifty-fifth year of the independence of the United States of America, J. & J. HARPER, of the said district, have deposited in this office the title of a book, the right whereof they claim as Proprietors, in the words following, to wit:

"The History of Modern Europe. With a View of the Progress of Society, from the Rise of the modern Kingdoms, to the Peace of Paris, in 1763. By William Russell, LL.D. And a Continuation of the History to the present Time, by William Jones, Esq.—With Annotations, by an American."

In conformity to the Act of the Congress of the United States, entitled "An Act for the encouragement of Learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the times therein mentioned." And also to an Act entitled, "An Act, supplementary to an Act, entitled an Act for the encouragement of Learning, by securing the copies of maps, charts, and books, to the authors and proprietors of such copies, during the times therein mentioned, and extending the benefits thereof to the arts of designing, engraving, and printing historical and other prints."

FREDERICK J. BETTS,
Clerk of the Southern District of New-York.

FONDO BIBLIOTECA PUBLICA
DEL ESTADO DE NUEVO LEON

CONTENTS OF THE THIRD VOLUME.

FROM THE PEACE OF PARIS IN 1763 TO THE TREATY OF AMIENS IN 1802.

LETTER I.

A View of the Situation of Great Britain consequent on the Termination of the late War. Approaching Dissensions with the American Colonies. A. D. 1764—1775.

CONSEQUENCES of the severe war in Germany and disbanding the armies	35
Increase of taxation and crime	35
Emigration of a surplus population	35
Increase of luxury in Great Britain	35
Tendency of war to create lucrative offices in the state	35
Effects of the late war upon the landed interest	35
Emigrations from Ireland and Scotland to North America	35
A. D. 1764 Commodore Byron's expedition in quest of new discoveries	36
Is followed by captains Wallis, Carteret, Cook, and Mulgrave	36
Extent of the British empire at the accession of George III	36
The British people dissatisfied with the late peace	36
1765 Conduct of the government towards the American colonies	36
Attempt to impose the stamp act upon them	36
How received by the colonists	37
Conduct of the Americans in reference to this attempt	37
Importance of the colonies at this period	37
A view of their constitution and government	37
Produce of its soil and industry, &c.	38
1766 Unwise proceedings of the British government towards her	38
Imposes a duty on tea, which the colonists resist	39
Proceedings at Boston, where three cargoes of tea are thrown into the sea	39
Parliament suspends the privileges of the port of Boston	39
Parliament revokes the original charter of Massachusetts bay	39
Parliament revokes its conduct regarding Canada	39
1772 The Americans convene a general congress	39
1774 Resolutions of the congress	39
New-York attempts to compromise between the colonies and mother-country	40
The British parliament rejects the proffered mediation	40
Reflections on this ill-fated rejection	40
Lord North deaf to the warning voice of Chatham	40
Some account of the English ministry	40
Changes in administration	40
1768 Contest between Wilkes and the ministry	40
1769 The former expelled the house of commons and outlawed	41

LETTER II.

View of the Affairs of the Northern States of Europe—Russia—Prussia—Austria—Poland; from the Treaty of Hubertsburg to the Treaty of Tschuen. A. D. 1763—1769.

1762 Peter III, czar of Muscovy, view of his reign	41
Is succeeded by Catharine II, who reigns with firmness	42
1764 Death of the innocent Ivan, her rival in the throne	42

Catharine prosecutes the undertakings of Peter the Great	42
--	----

CALAMITIES OF POLAND, 1764.

Retrospect of the affairs of Poland—death of Augustus III	43
Treaty of alliance between Catharine and the king of Prussia	43
Stipulations respecting Poland	43
Various parties in Poland	43
Tumultuous proceedings of the diet of Warsaw	43
To counteract which, Catharine marches an army into Poland	43
Election of Stanislaus Augustus	43
1766 The clergy averse to his tolerant principles	43
The king unable to resist their influence	44
The Russian army invests Warsaw	44
Domineering conduct of the Catholic party	44
1767 The Poles enter into confederations	44
The Russian army decides their deliberations	44
Grant of allowance to the king	44
The pope remonstrates with him on accepting it	44
A civil war ensues	45
Dreadful ravages of the Haidamaks	45
Sufferings of the Jews in Poland	45
The Russians besiege Cracow	45
And are assisted by a reinforcement from Turkey	45
1769 The king proclaims them rebels	45
Horrible state of Poland at this time	45
Austria inclines to assist the Poles	45
Austria marches some troops towards Poland	45
Conduct of Frederick, king of Prussia	45
Many of the Poles abandon their country	46
1772 Russia, Austria, and Prussia combine to dismember Poland	46
Reflections on the conduct of these three despotic powers	46
They disagree about the amount of individual spoliation	47
Amusing pleas of Frederick the Great, for his share	47
Weighty reasons urged by Austria	48
Empress of Russia seizes her portion without plea	48
The king and senate of Poland lament their hapless fate	48
The subjects of Poland reduced from eight millions to four	48
Proceedings of the diet in consequence	49

LETTER III.

Rupture between Russia and Turkey—English Fleet under Admiral Elphinstone assists the Russians and defeats the Turks—Dreadful Ravages of the Plague at Moscow and the Country adjacent A. D. 1768—1774.

1768 The Turks view with jealousy the proceedings in Poland	49
Russian apology for those proceedings	50
The Russians burn the Turkish town of Balta	50
The Russian ambassador at the Porte arrested and imprisoned	50
Declaration of war against Russia	50
Preparations for war on both sides	50
The Turkish army marches towards the Danube	50
Success of the Turks and Tartars—the towns burned, and families enslaved	50

	Page
1769 The Russians retreat and recross the Danube	59
Disasters of the Turkish armies, and great desertions from them	50, 51
Russian armies effect a junction and take Chotin	51
Occupation of Moldavia and Wallachia by the Russians	51
1770 The Russian fleet appears in the Archipelago	51
Battle of Halil, and defeat of the Turks	51
The Russians besiege Bender	51
After two months' siege they storm the town and succeed	51
Successes on the part of the Russians in Moldavia, &c.	51
Description of the country—its produce, &c. &c.	51
The seat of war transferred to the Peloponnesus	51
Insurrection of the Greek provinces against the Turks	52
1771 The Russians receive a check and retreat to Navarino	52
Admiral Elphinstone defeats the Turkish fleet in the sea of Epidaurus	52
Description of the engagement	52
The English set fire to the Turkish fleet	52
A magazine at Tschesné blown up, and the town destroyed	52
The conquerors appear before Lemnos, and prepare to take the place	52
Lemnos relieved, and the Russian fleet retires to Paros	53
The plague breaks out at Yassy, and is conveyed to the Russian army	53
It reaches Moscow and produces dreadful ravages	53
1772 The Russians take possession of the Crimea	53
Particulars of Ali Bey	53
His contest with his brother-in-law Mohammed	54
Ali Bey is defeated in Egypt and his head sent to Constantinople	54
1773 The Russians cross the Danube, but fail in the siege of Silistria	54
Some account of Mussum Oglu, a Turkish chief	54
The Russians compelled by him to retreat across the Danube	54
They fail in an attempt upon Eubœa—but plunder Crete and Cyprus	54
Return of the Russian fleet to the Baltic	54
The Swedes threaten Russia	54
The Cossacks make incursions into the Russian provinces	54
1774 Death of the grand seignor Mustafa	54
Is succeeded by his brother Abdulhamed	54
The janissaries manifest a tumultuous disposition	55
Peace concluded between Russia and Turkey	55
LETTER IV.
Retrospect of the Affairs of Sweden, A. D. 1761—1770—Abdication of the King Adolphus Frederick—Gustavus III. succeeds to the Throne—Revolution of 1772—Dispute for the Bavarian Succession, A. D. 1777.
The constitution of Sweden aristocratical	55
Review of the politics of Sweden, from the time of Charles XII.	55
The king reduced to a cipher in the state	55
Rapid decline of its manufactures	56
Complaints of the ascendancy of the aristocracy	56
The clergy complain of the loss of their tithes	56
General dissension prevails throughout the country	56
1769 The king demands the summoning of a diet, which the senate refuses	56
The king resigns his regal authority	56
General anarchy prevails during nine days	56
1770 Extraordinary diet assembled at Nyköping	56
Death of king Adolphus Frederick, February the 12th, 1771	56
Is succeeded by his son Gustavus III.	56

	Page
Charles duke of Sudermania raises the standard of insurrection	57
Proceedings of the senate at this juncture	57
The king and the senate at issue	57
The citizens of Stockholm take the oath of allegiance to Gustavus	57
A new constitution is promulgated	57

DISPUTE FOR THE BAVARIAN SUCCESSION.

Death of Maximilian Joseph	57
Contested claims for a successor	58
Interference of Frederick, king of Prussia	58
Opposes the house of Austria, and takes part with the elector Palatine	58
Pleas of the court of Vienna	59
Who are indignant at the conduct of his Prussian majesty	59
The armies of Austria and Prussia are put in motion	59
Diplomatic proceedings between the two powers	59
1778 The Prussian army advances into Bohemia	59
Result of the first campaign	59
Russia and France mediate between the parties	60
1779 Treaty of Teschen signed	60
Conditions of the treaty	60

LETTER V.

Affairs of Portugal—Administration of Count D'Oeyras—Attempt to assassinate Joseph I.—Execution of the Conspirators—War declared by Spain, A. D. 1762—Result of the Campaign—Commerce and internal Policy of the Portuguese Government.

Retrospective view of the Portuguese history	60
1750 Reign of Joseph I.	60
1755 Earthquake at Lisbon	61
Its calamitous consequences	61
Intrepid behaviour of the count d'Oeyras	61
Who acquires the entire confidence of the king	61
The jealousy of the grandees inflamed	62
Hint at the Portuguese character	62
A horrible conspiracy plotting in secret	62
Character of the conspirators	62
Extensive ramifications of the plot	62
1758 Attempted assassination of the king, September the 3d	62
Prudent conduct of (Carvalho) count d'Oeyras on the occasion	63
He lulls suspicion asleep for six months	63
Gives a public ball in honour of his daughter's marriage	63
At which all the conspirators are arrested	64
Execution of the principal conspirators	64
Expulsion of the jesuits from the Portuguese territories	64
Spain prepares to attack Portugal	65
The court of Madrid jealous of British influence in Portugal	65
The Portuguese unprepared for war	65
The latter apply to England for assistance	65
Six thousand British troops sent to Lisbon	65
Character of the count de Lippe	66
1762 Forty thousand Spaniards invade Portugal	66
Their extraordinary ignorance of the country	66
Progress of the campaign	66
The Spaniards lay siege to Almeida	67
Scandalous surrender of the place	67
The Spaniards march to Villa Velha and capture it	67
General Burgoyne attacks and captures Valença d'Alcantara	68
Colonel Hamilton surprises the Spanish camp of Alvarez	68
The Spaniards grow sick of the campaign	68
Success of the Spanish arms in South America	68
Spain relinquishes all farther attempts on Portugal	68
The Portuguese gainers by the war	68
Destruction of the custom-house at Lisbon by fire	68

	Page
Review of the Portuguese government, commerce, and finances	68
State of the marine in 1766	69
Commerce of Portugal	69
Count d'Oeyras attempts a new order of things	69
Orders many of their vineyards to be destroyed and sown with grain	70
Dependence of Portugal on England	70
Various projects of count d'Oeyras to get rid of this	70
His attention to agriculture	70
His attention to the finances of Portugal	71
His reduction of the number of clerks in the public offices	71
Estimates of the revenues of the country	71

LETTER VI.

State of France from the Peace of Versailles, in 1763, to the Death of Louis XV. in 1774—with some Account of Corsica.

1762 Exhausted state of France at the conclusion of the late war	71
Administration of the duke de Choiseul	72
State of the nation, and general dissatisfaction	72
Expiring influence of the jesuits	72
Formidable opposition to the court manifests itself	72
The parliament of Paris refuses to register the king's edicts	72
Its example followed by most of the other parliaments	72
Paramount influence of the military	72
1763 Trial and punishment of public delinquents	72
Amount to which they had defrauded the nation	72
The ministry unable to pay the Canada bills held by British merchants	73
Negotiations on this subject between the two governments	73
1764 The French minister unable to assist their East India company	73
Death of the king's favourite mistress M. de Pompadour	73
Strictures on her character and influence at court	73
Anticipations founded on her death not realized	74
The French get possession of Corsica	74
Ineffectual remonstrances of other courts against the measure	74
1765 Financial operations in favour of Great Britain	74
Louis XV. grants a pension to the widow of the persecuted Calas	74
And punishes the emperor of Morocco for insulting the French flag	75
Death of the dauphin (father of Louis XVI.)	75
His amiable character	75
1766 The parliament of Brittany dissolved for its spirited measures	75
The king holds a bed of justice at Paris, March the 3d	76
Arbitrary conduct of Louis XV.	76
Remonstrance of the parliament of Rouen	76
The king's answer and subsequent conduct	76
Trial of general Lally—his personal history	76
His trial, condemnation, and execution	76
Reflections on this subject	76
Instructions of Louis XV. to his minister at Geneva	77
Estimate of the character and talents of the duke de Choiseul	77
His deference to England	78
His conduct in relation to the family-compact	78
1767 And the quarrel between the duke of Parma and the pope	78
The duke expels the jesuits from his dominions	78
Bull of pope Clement XIII.	78
He rouses the courts of France, Spain, and Vienna against him	79
Louis XV. seizes on Avignon	79

	Page
The towns of Carpentras and Cavaillon are given up to the French	79
The duke of Modena lays claim to the duchy of Ferrara	79
The French flag hoisted at Bastia	79
Contest between the French troops and the Corsicans	79
Continued dissensions between Louis XV. and the parliament	80
1768 Death of the queen of France	80
The king is applied unto to abolish the grand council of state	80
Difficulties arising from a scarcity of provisions	80
The parliament prohibits the exportation of corn	80
Chagrin of the monarch at their conduct	81
1769 Embarrassed state of the finances of France	81
General pressure of trade and commerce	81
The duke de Choiseul obliged to violate the public faith	81
Bankruptcy of the East India company	81
Declining influence of the duke de Choiseul	81
Extraordinary exertion to regain his popularity	81
The king restores the parliament of Brittany	81
Struggle between the duke de Choiseul and the duke d'Aiguillon	81
1770 Choiseul negotiates a treaty of marriage between the dauphin and Maria Antoinette, archduchess of Austria	82
Last acts of Choiseul's administration	82
D'Aiguillon's persecution of M. de Chalotais	82
The king winks at the guilt of d'Aiguillon and saves him from punishment	83
Unpopularity of this measure	83
The parliaments of Bourdeaux and Toulouse indignant at this step	83
Arbitrary conduct of Louis XV. towards his parliament	83
The king loses the affections of his subjects	84

LETTER VII.

View of the internal State of France, continued to the Death of Louis XV.

1770 Calamitous state of France	84
The king and his mistress, Madame Barré	84
Jealousy of the dutchess of Grammont	85
The king allows his mistress to draw on the treasury	85
The duke de Choiseul's remark on learning this	85
Marriage of the dauphin, afterward Louis XVI.	85
Horrible accident attending that event	85
Scarcity of corn in all parts of France	86
War threatened between England, France, and Spain	86
1771 Choiseul is dismissed from office and exiled	87
Treachorous conduct of the duke d'Aiguillon	87
Arbitrary proceedings against the parliament of Paris	87
The king and his parliament at issue	87
The members are arrested and sent into exile	87
A new tribunal substituted for the parliament	87
Establishment of superior courts	88
The measure universally disliked	88
A protest against it enrages the king	88
The king quarrels with the princes of the blood royal	88
D'Aiguillon banishes the members of the châtelet	88
Several parliaments are suppressed	88
The nature of the French parliaments explained	89
Death of the king of Sweden	89
Mistake respecting the French parliaments rectified	89
Ratification of a treaty between Sweden and France	89
1773 Hostilities threatened between Great Britain and France	89
A scarcity of corn gives rise to riots in various parts of France	89
Louis XV. is seized with the small-pox and dies, at 64.	90
Sketch of his reign	90

LETTER VIII.

Affairs of Spain—Her Government and Resources, A. D. 1763—1780—Glance at Naples and Switzerland.

	Page
Extent of the Spanish territory in the peninsula	90
Miserable effects of its government	90
Concordat obtained from Rome, regulating its ecclesiastical affairs	91
The tribunal of faith, and appointment of its officers	91
Proceedings of Don Carlos III. in the year 1761	91
A superabundance of priests, monks, and nuns	91
Administration of the marquis di Squillace	91
Strictures on its government, laws, and usages	91
Sources of its revenue—its tax of a tenth penny	92
Its importations of gold and silver from South America	92
Duty on its exports to the colonies	93
Sundry articles of taxation, and their annual produce	93
Cursory remarks on its financial department	93
Revenues of the archbishops and bishops	94
Organization of the military department under Philip V.	94
Organization of the naval system	94
Statistical account of Naples	94
Statistical account of Switzerland	95

LETTER IX.

The Court of Rome and the Jesuits—Intrigues of the latter in various Countries, and their final Expulsion from Europe. A. D. 1759—1773.

Reflections on the society of the jesuits	96
Their union and order, and political influence under a religious guise	96
How treated in various countries of Europe	96
Conduct of the marquis Carvajal, in relation to the jesuits	96
The jesuits expelled from Europe found an asylum in Paraguay	97
Remarkable account of the polity and flourishing condition of that republic	97
Spain and Portugal become jealous of them	97
Flourishing condition of Paraguay under the jesuits	97
Become tributary to Spain and Portugal	97
Their country invaded by the latter	97
Instructions of the order detected by a Spanish officer	97
The sufferings to which the jesuits were exposed	98
Jesuits suspected of being concerned in the affair of the king of Portugal	98
Their total expulsion from Europe determined on	98
Conduct of pope Benedict XIV.	99
Conduct of pope Clement XIII.	99
The duke de Choiseul inimical to the jesuits	99
1767 They are finally driven from France	100
Those resident in Spain expelled into the states of the church	100
Are driven from the territory of Parma	100
Pope Clement XIII. supplicates the interference of Maria Theresa	101
Death of pope Clement, and election of Ganganelli, as Clement XIV.	101, 102
1773 Who issues a bull for the dissolution of the order of the jesuits	102

LETTER X.

A View of Holland or the Dutch Republic—Its Constitution and Government—Also of the Germanic Circles. A. D. 1763—1781.

Situation of the Dutch provinces—their constitution &c.	102
Their attachment to the house of Orange	103
The stadtholder must be a Protestant	103

	Page
France and England contend for their commercial alliance	104
Her possessions in both the Indies	104
Of the barrier treaty—her fleet—dikes—commerce, &c.	104
Her system of taxation—revenue, &c.	105
1781 Naval engagement off the Doggerbank	105
The Dutch attached to liberal principles of government	105

GERMANY.

Constitution of the Germanic body—the golden bull, &c. &c.	106
Of its electors—diets—colleges—emperors, &c.	106
Dukedom of Bavaria, population, revenues, &c.	107
Electorate of Saxony, population, revenues, &c.	107
Electorate of Brunswick—population—revenues, &c.	107
Electorate of Mayence, population, revenues, &c.	108
Electorate of Treves—Cologne—landgrave of Hesse Cassel, &c.	108
Dominions of Wurtemberg—Mecklenburg—Salzburg, &c.	108
Circle of Swabia—the imperial cities, Hamburg, Frankfurt, &c.	109
Denmark, Norway, and Holstein—Sweden, &c.	109, 110

LETTER XI.

View of the Affairs of Great Britain—Commencement and Progress of the American War. A. D. 1775—1778.

Arrangements between Great Britain and France at the peace of 1763	110
This period a new era in agriculture with England	111
Her rapid increase in products of the soil, manufactures, &c.	111
1771 Of Ireland and her linen trade	111
Of the province of Canada, and its fur trade	111
The mines of England—lead, copper, and coal works	111
1775 The export trade of England	111
Product of her colonies in the West Indies	111
Commencement of the American war—battle of Lexington	111
Great Britain subsidizes the princes of Germany	112
Manner of conducting the American war	112
France and Spain join the Americans against England	112
American congress convened at Philadelphia	113
They prohibit all supplies to the Newfoundland fisheries	113
Generals Howe, Burgoyne, and Clinton arrive out at Boston	113
The province of Massachusetts bay annul the charter of William and Mary	113
George Washington appointed to command the American forces	113
General Gage issues a proclamation on the part of England	113
Battle of Bunker's Hill	113
Washington arrives at Boston, and invests the town	114
The British governor of Virginia abandons the province	114
Congress publishes a declaration of the causes of their revolt	114
1776 Washington fortifies Dorchester heights, near Boston	115
Has recourse to a ruse de guerre , and gets possession of Boston	115
Effect of this on the cause of the colonists	115
Quebec blockaded for five months	115
Arrival of reinforcements from England and Ireland	115
Burgoyne opens the campaign successfully in Canada	115
Sir Henry Clinton proceeds to North Carolina	115
Attack on the city of Charleston unsuccessful	115
Return of the British troops to New-York	116

	Page
Congress encouraged—and the colonists declare for independence	116
American declaration of independence, July the 4th, 1776	116
Lord North's conciliatory bill, intrusted to general and lord Howe	117
Their application to Washington and Franklin rejected	117
The British army landed on Long Island	117
Battle of Brooklyn—success of the British	117
Retreat of the armies to New-York	118
Washington declines to defend the town	118
The British occupy it—one-third of the city burned	118
The American army dispirited, and nearly annihilated	118
Capture of Rhode Island by the British	118
Lord Cornwallis proposes to follow up his success but not allowed	118
Capture of general Lee, in New-Jersey	118
Lord Howe refuses to exchange him	118
Signing of a treaty of union and confederation between the thirteen colonies	119
Means taken to levy a new army	119
Internal dissensions among the colonists	119
New-York proposes an alliance with Great Britain	119
Washington detaches part of his army thither to check the project	119
Washington defeats the Hessians at Trenton—death of colonel Rall	119
France, Spain, &c. open their ports to American cruisers	119
1777 Dilatory conduct of general Howe	120
Affair of Quibbltown	120
General Howe proceeds to Pennsylvania	120
General Howe captures Philadelphia	120
Removal of congress to Yorktown in Virginia	120

LETTER XII.

History of the American War continued—France and Spain take Part with the Colonies—England declares War against both Countries—Important Naval Operations. A. D. 1778, 1779.

General Burgoyne takes the command of the army in Canada	120
Battle of Ticonderoga, and defeat of the provincials	120
The latter retreat to Saratoga	120
General Arnold reinforces them with a train of artillery	121
The British army in want of provisions	121
Burgoyne attacks the Americans at Stillwater	121
General Arnold wounded, and the Americans retreat	121
Burgoyne changes his ground to occupy a strong post	121
The Americans take advantage of it to cut off his retreat	121
His army surrounded, and he calls a council of war	121
Burgoyne opens a treaty with general Gates	121
His whole army surrender prisoners of war	121
Proceedings in the British parliament, November, 1777	122
Discomfiture of lord North and his colleagues	122
Lord Chatham's motion for the orders given to Burgoyne	122
Exertions of the ministry to procure fresh supplies	122
1778 Lord North proposes to parliament conciliatory measures	122
Disgusts his own friends by his conduct in this instance	122
Mr. Fox announces a treaty signed at Paris between France and America	123
Lord North announces this treaty to parliament	123
The duke of Richmond proposes the recognition of American independence	123
Lord Chatham's memorable opposition to this in the house of peers	123
His illness, death, and funeral, &c.	123
Arrival of general Burgoyne from America	124

	Page
Is refused admission to the royal presence	124
Renewal of the warlike operations in America	124
Sir H. Clinton succeeds sir W. Howe in the command of the army	124
Arrival of lord North's commissioners in America	124
Their propositions submitted to congress and the president's answer	124
The British troops evacuate Philadelphia and retire to New-York	124
Their extraordinary march from the Delaware to Sandy Hook	124
The French fleet prepare for sea at Brest	125
Hesitation respecting the declaration of war	125
Capture of the Licorne and Belle Poule, two French frigates	125
Admiral Keppel returns to Portsmouth	125
The French and British fleets put to sea	125
They meet and manœuvre on the 23d of July, but separate without an engagement	125
Dissatisfaction of the country with the result	125
A French squadron sails from Toulon, under count d'Estaing	125
Their arrival at the capes of the Delaware	126
Lord Howe declines attacking them in the bay of Boston	126
Lord Howe resigns his commission and returns to England	126
The island of Dominica surrenders to the French	126
Sanguinary proceedings of the British and Indians on the settlement of Wyoming, on the river Susquehanna	126
The Americans retaliate on the Canadian settlements	126
Capture of the town of Savannah, in Georgia, by the British	126
1779 The British army acts on the defensive	127
The Americans attack a fort on the river Penobscot	127
Sir George Collier puts them to flight and destroys their vessels	127
Arrival of count d'Estaing on the coast of Georgia	127
He captures the island of St. Vincent	127
Grenada also surrenders to him	127
Attacks Savannah but fails, and returns to Europe	127
Lord North announces hostilities on the part of Spain	127
The fleets of France and Spain combine and enter the English channel	127
Commencement of the siege of Gibraltar by the Spaniards	128
Riotous proceedings in Scotland on account of the Catholics	128
They prevent the passing the Catholic relief bill	128
Disturbed state of affairs in Ireland	128
Discontents prevalent in England	128
The counties of York and Middlesex petition for peace	128

LETTER XIII.

Disgraceful Riots in London—Lord George Gordon committed to the Tower, 1780—Progress of the War in America—Naval Transactions—Hurricane in the West Indies—Declaration of War against Holland—Siege of Gibraltar. A. D. 1780, 1781.

1780 Lord George Gordon, and the Protestant association	129
Meeting at Coachmaker's hall	129
Meeting in St. George's fields	129
A large mob assemble round the house of commons	129
Lord George Gordon presents a petition against concessions to the Catholics	129
Troops of the line attempt to disperse the mob	129
Demolition of the Catholic chapels in London	129
Other outrages committed—Newgate prison burned	130
Also the fleet and king's bench—thirty fires seen at once	130

	Page		Page
The military fire upon the mob—number of lives lost.....	130	He falls in with the detachment under La Fayette.....	139
Supineness of the city magistrates.....	130	Washington outwits Sir Henry Clinton by means of intercepted letters.....	138
Lord George Gordon seized and sent to the tower.....	130	Marches his army into Virginia, and unites with La Fayette.....	139
Effects of these riots in discouraging public meetings.....	130	Arrival of count de Grasse with troops from Europe.....	139
Admiral Geary falls in with a homeward bound fleet of French merchantmen, and captures twelve of them.....	130	Sir Samuel Hood falls in with him in the Chesapeake, and a partial engagement takes place.....	139
The combined fleets capture five outward bound British East Indiamen.....	131	Superiority of the enemy's force, and lord Cornwallis's desperate situation.....	139
A British outward bound fleet captured off Newfoundland.....	131	He waits for succours from sir H. Clinton, which do not arrive.....	139
Admiral Darby succeeds Geary in the command of the channel fleet.....	131	Is compelled to capitulate, and surrenders his army to general Washington.....	139
He meets a French squadron, but declines an engagement.....	131	Disastrous consequences of Cornwallis's surrender.....	140
Count Rochambeau arrives at Rhode Island with troops, &c.....	131	All offensive operations cease on the part of the British army.....	140
Lord Cornwallis defeats general Gates at Camden.....	131	The Spaniards get possession of West Florida.....	140
Tarleton defeats Sumpter at the fords of Catawba.....	131	They meditate the capture of Minorca.....	140
Disaster of colonel Ferguson, on the borders of North Carolina.....	131	The combined fleets threaten an attack on the British in Torbay.....	141
Major Andre, a British officer, seized as a spy in the camp of general Arnold—is tried by a court-martial, and hanged.....	132	But afterward desist and return into port to re-fit.....	141
Dreadful hurricane in the West Indies.....	132	Admiral Kempenfeldt captures an outward bound convoy.....	141
Great Britain and the Dutch provinces involved in hostilities.....	133	His fleet inadequate to meet the enemy.....	141
Reflections on the war with America.....	133	Admiral Parker engages the Dutch fleet off the Doggerbank.....	142
1781 The campaign in America opens favourably for England.....	133	Memorable issue of this conflict.....	142
Speedy reverse of fortune to lord Cornwallis.....	133	Complaints against the conduct of the admiralty.....	142
Fox and Pitt press upon the minister the necessity of peace.....	133	Commodore Johnstone attacked by the French admiral Suffrein at the island of St. Jago, with a superior force.....	142
The French make an attack on the island of Jersey.....	134	He protects his convoy and captures five Dutch East Indiamen.....	143
The inhabitants defend their country, and destroy the French army.....	134
Narrative of the siege of Gibraltar.....	134	LETTER XIV.
General Elliot's gallant defence.....	135	Naval Exploits of Great Britain—Proceedings in the British Parliament—Resignation of Lord North—Successes of Admiral Rodney in the West Indies—Defeat of the combined Fleets—Relief of Gibraltar—Preliminaries of Peace signed at Versailles. A. D. 1782—1784.
Elliot meditates an attack on the Spanish camp.....	135
His preparations for it.....	135	1782 A large fleet from France sails to the West Indies.....	143
Disposition and marching of his troops.....	135	Sir Samuel Hood falls in with them near Antigua.....	143
Surprises the Spanish camp—puts them to flight—and totally demolishes their works.....	135, 136	The French armament attacks St. Lucia, but fails.....	143
Progress of the war under lord Cornwallis.....	136	Rodney proceeds from St. Eustatius in quest of them.....	143
Defection of general Arnold from the American standard.....	139	The French attack the island of Tobago, and capture it.....	144
Projected plan of the campaign of 1781.....	136	They sail from St. Domingo.....	144
Colonel Morgan defeats Tarleton at fort Ninety-six.....	136	Rodney returns to England—complaints against him.....	144
Lord Cornwallis pursues general Greene, who retreats before him.....	137	The country grows tired of the war.....	144
Greene makes a stand near Guildford courthouse.....	137	Assembling of parliament, November, 1781.....	145
After a well-contested battle, the Americans retreat.....	137	Debates on the king's speech.....	145
The British unable to pursue them, and Cornwallis retreats to Wilmington, in North Carolina.....	137	Lord North's apology for continuing the war.....	145
Distress to which lord Cornwallis finds himself reduced.....	137	How treated by Burke and Pitt.....	145
Lord Rawdon, in Virginia, watches the motions of Greene.....	137	Debate on general Conway's motion for peace.....	146
Whom he successfully attacks at Hobkirk's hill.....	137	The motion carried against the minister.....	146
Attempt of Greene to take fort Ninety-six by assault.....	137	Lord North lingers in office.....	146
Skilful enterprises of lord Rawdon.....	138	The opposition force him to resign.....	146
He passes Congarook creek, and drives the enemy before him.....	138	Estimate of his lordship's talents and character.....	147
Lord Rawdon returns to Europe on account of ill health.....	138	Sir H. Clinton superseded by sir Guy Carleton.....	147
Is succeeded by colonel Stuart, who has a sharp action with general Greene.....	138	The Spaniards capture the Bahamas.....	147
The British confine their exertions to the defence of Charleston.....	138	And meditate an attack on Jamaica.....	147
Lord Cornwallis retreats from Wilmington to Petersburg.....	138	Serious apprehensions for its safety.....	148
		Rodney sails from England for its relief.....	148
		Engagement of the hostile fleets off the island of Dominique.....	148
		Particulars of the action, and Rodney's victory.....	148
		Severe loss on the part of the enemy.....	149
		Losses of the Dutch in Africa and the East Indies.....	149
		Naval exploits in the British channel.....	150

	Page		Page
Loss of Rodney's prizes in a hurricane.....	150	He once more convokes the notables.....	162
Affecting loss of the Royal George, &c.....	150	Plan for assembling the states-general.....	162
The siege of Gibraltar renewed.....	150	Opening of the states-general, 5th of May, 1789.....	162
Extensive preparations for its capture.....	150	Commencement of the French revolution.....	162
General Elliot's skilful defence.....	151
His destruction of the enemy's works.....	151	LETTER XVI.
Captain Curtis and his gun-boats annoy the Spaniards.....	151	Affairs of France, during the Year 1789—Opening of the States-general—Formation of the National Assembly—Insurrection of Paris—Formation of the National Guard—Destruction of the Bastille.
Their efforts to save the enemy.....	151	Reflections on the evils attendant on revolutions.....	163
The Spaniards attempt to blockade the port.....	151	These evils irremediable.....	163
Lord Howe watches the combined fleets, and relieves Gibraltar.....	152	Attendant circumstances on the opening of the states-general.....	163
Offers them battle—a partial engagement ensues.....	152	Description of the royal sitting.....	163
Lord Howe baffles the enemy and returns to port.....	152	Address of the monarch, Louis XVI.....	164
Reflections on the state of the war.....	152	Speech of Barentin, keeper of the seals.....	164
Preliminaries of peace signed at Versailles, January the 20th, 1789.....	153	Strictures on the tendency of his speech.....	164
Terms of pacification.....	153	Speech of M. Necker on the occasion.....	165
Definitive treaties with France, Spain, and America.....	153	Mistake of the government respecting the convocation of the states-general.....	165
		Impolitic conduct of the king.....	165
LETTER XV.		His irresolution, and the indecision of his measures.....	165
State of France at the Accession of Louis XVI.—Distressed Condition of her Finances—Ministerial Changes—Maurepas, Turgot, Malesherbes, Necker, and Brienne—Opposition to their respective Measures for relieving the Embarrassments of the Government—Necessity of a Revolution. A. D. 1780—1789.		The court desirous of annulling the states-general.....	166
Preliminary observations.....	154	Manœuvres of the clergy and noblesse.....	166
Review of the reign of Louis XIV.....	154	The court seeks a coalition with them against the states-general.....	166
Privileges of the noblesse and the clergy.....	154	A struggle ensues between the different parties.....	166
Unequal distribution of the church revenues.....	154	Prudent conduct of the commons.....	166
Depressed state of the lower classes of society.....	154	The national assembly declared.....	167
Effects of the extravagance of the court.....	154	The clergy and noblesse invited to assist in the verification.....	167
His despotic and arbitrary reign.....	155	First decree of the national assembly.....	167
Death of Louis XIV., and the new order of things which it gave rise to.....	155	Their conduct inspires the enthusiasm of the nation.....	168
State of the parliament of Paris at the accession of Louis XV.....	155	Attempt to withdraw the king from the counsels of Necker.....	168
The French people begin to think for themselves.....	155	The monarch yields to the advice of a secret council.....	168
Reflections on the power of opinion.....	156	Want of energy in the conduct of Necker.....	168
The tiers-état rise into dignity.....	156	Bailly made president of the national assembly.....	168
State of France at the accession of Louis XVI.....	156	Shutting up of the hall of the assembly.....	168
Sketch of his character and earlier part of his reign.....	156, 157	The national assembly repair to the tennis-court.....	169
His imprudent choice of Maurepas as prime minister.....	157	Their sittings made permanent, and their oath to give a constitution to France.....	169
Character of that minister.....	157	Deprived of the tennis-court, the assembly meet in the church of St. Louis.....	169
His successors in office, and their measures.....	157	The clergy unite themselves with the national assembly.....	169
Turgot, Malesherbes, and Necker.....	157	The king appears in the assembly, and annuls all its proceedings.....	169
Necker's administration signalized by its economy.....	158	He commands the deputies to separate and withdraw.....	169
He becomes unpopular and retires.....	158	Mirabeau's intrepid conduct on the occasion.....	169
Imbecility of Louis XVI. and influence of the queen.....	158	The death-blow is given to the royal authority.....	170
Calonne becomes minister of finance.....	158	Vacillating conduct of the court respecting Necker.....	170
Prodigality of his administration.....	159	The duke of Orleans's party join the national assembly.....	170
The fall of Calonne, who is succeeded by the archbishop of Toulouse.....	159	Abject state to which the influence of the court is reduced.....	170
Reflections on his administration.....	159	Louis XVI. is advised to employ force in order to arrest the progress of the revolution.....	170
The assembly of notables dissolved and expelled.....	159, 160	The national assembly commence their legislative functions.....	170
It returns and compromises with the minister.....	160	Addresses of congratulation sent them from the principal towns.....	170
Ministerial measures of the archbishop.....	160	The king assembles his troops at Versailles.....	170
The king and his parliament at issue on various points.....	160	Paris is surrounded with an armed force.....	170
A demand for the convocation of the states-general.....	160	The assembly demand from the king their being withdrawn.....	170
The whole magistracy of France displaced to make room for a new judicial organization.....	160	He declines a compliance, and makes a strange proposal.....	170
General opposition to these measures throughout France.....	160	Agitated state of Paris, and its devotion to the assembly.....	171
Increasing clamour for the convocation of the states-general.....	161	Meetings for public discussion at the Palais-Royal.....	171
Brienne promises to convoke them and resigns his office.....	161
Remarks on his administration.....	161
Necker recalled to office.....	161
The opposition which he now had to encounter.....	161

THE

HISTORY

OF

MODERN EUROPE:

WITH

A VIEW OF THE PROGRESS OF SOCIETY FROM THE RISE OF THE MODERN
KINGDOMS TO THE PEACE OF PARIS, IN 1763.

BY WILLIAM RUSSELL, LL.D.

AND

A CONTINUATION OF THE HISTORY TO THE PRESENT TIME.

BY WILLIAM JONES, ESQ.

WITH ANNOTATIONS BY AN AMERICAN.

IN THREE VOLUMES.

VOL. III.

NEW-YORK:

54614

PUBLISHED BY HARPER & BROTHERS

NO. 82 CLIFF-STREET.

10005