

CONTENTS.

The prisons of the Abbaye are forced, and the prisoners liberated.....	Page 171	Mistaken conduct of Mirabeau.....	Page 180
Necker is removed from the ministry and expelled.....	171	Effects of the proceedings of the 14th of July on the provinces.....	181
Effect of this measure on the Parisians.....	171	Proclamation of the national assembly, and tribunal of the châtelet.....	181
Proposal of Camille Desmoulins.....	171	Proposal for the abolition of the privileged orders.....	181
The citizens rush to arms.....	171	Extent of these spoliations.....	181
The bust of Necker and the duke of Orleans carried in triumph.....	172	Medal struck in honour of Louis XVI. "the restorer of French liberty".....	181
The military attack the mob—conduct of the prince of Lambesc.....	172	Effects of the night of the 4th of August.....	181
The call to arms becomes general throughout Paris.....	172	Review of the progress of the revolution, from the 5th of May to the 5th of August, 1789.....	182
Engagement between the French guards and royal Germans.....	172
Consequence of the defection of the French guards and other troops of the line.....	172
Meetings of the citizens at the Hotel-de-Ville.....	172
Perilous nights of the 12th and 13th of July.....	172
Proceedings at Versailles—speeches of Mounier and Lally Tollendal.....	173
Insurrection of Paris announced—they send an address to the king.....	173
Spirited conduct of the assembly.....	173
They vote their sittings permanent.....	173
The citizens of Paris call for a supply of arms.....	174
Conduct of M. de Flesselles, provost of the city.....	174
Pillaging of the mob in quest of arms.....	174
Organization of the bourgeois militia.....	174
Enrolment of the citizens.....	174
Disappointment of the mob respecting a supply of arms.....	175
They give orders for fifty thousand pikes to be made.....	175
The people find a depot of arms in the hotel of invalids.....	175
Cannon planted for the defence of the city.....	175
A deputation is sent to the governor of the bastille.....	175
The armed citizens march in great numbers to the bastille.....	175
M. Delaunay, the governor, declines a compliance with the request of the citizens.....	175
The multitude demand the surrender of the fortress.....	176
They seize the bridge, and are fired upon by the garrison.....	176
The bastille is besieged, and the mob demand its surrender.....	176
Arrival of the French guards with cannon.....	176
The governor threatens to blow up the fortress, but is prevented.....	176
The besiegers take possession of the bastille, and put the governor and others to death.....	177
Return of the mob to the Hotel-de-Ville.....	177
Flesselles, provost of the city, is put to death.....	177
Measures for the defence of the city.....	177
Proceedings of the court at Versailles, who threaten vengeance to the Parisians.....	178
The delusion under which the court acted at this time.....	178
Preparations for an attack on the Parisians.....	178
Firmness of the national assembly at this perilous crisis.....	178
Astonishment of the king on hearing of the destruction of the bastille.....	178
Mirabeau's address to the deputies who were sent to the king.....	179
The king appears in the midst of the assembly.....	179
His sullen reception with that body.....	179
The declaration of his sentiments applauded.....	179
He proposes the recall of Necker, and consents to proceed to Paris, where he arrives at the head of the municipality and Parisian guard.....	179
Bailliy tenders him the keys of the city.....	180
The monarch's reception at the Hotel-de-Ville.....	180
The testimonies of affection tendered him, and his return to Versailles.....	180
Dismissal of his counter-revolutionary ministers, and departure of his brothers.....	180
Necker returns in triumph—his entry into Paris.....	180
He demands a general amnesty, and becomes unpopular.....	180
		View of the State of Parties in France—The Constituent Assembly—The Clergy and the Noblesse—The Orleans Party—Constitutional Labours; Declaration of Rights; Permanence and Unity of the legislative Body; royal Sanction; external Agitation; Insurrection of the 5th and 6th of October, 1789—The King removes his Residence to Paris.....
		Effects of the revolution in the provinces.....	182
		These evils not fairly chargeable on the national assembly.....	182
		Something of them must accompany all revolutions.....	183
		The national assembly comprised the ablest men in the nation.....	183
		View of the parties into which it was divided.....	183
		Abbé Maury and Cazalès represented the clergy and noblesse.....	183
		The leading object of these two orators.....	183
		The party of Necker and the ministry described.....	184
		These latter termed the monarchists, or moderate party.....	184
		The republican or national party.....	184
		The leaders of this party described.....	184
		Character and talents of Dupont.....	185
		Character and talents of the abbé Siéyès.....	185
		Character and talents of Mirabeau.....	185
		Character and talents of the duke of Orleans.....	186
		The assembly divided into committees.....	186
		Renewal of the declaration of rights.....	186
		On the organization of the legislative power.....	187
		Of the power of the sovereign in the state.....	187
		Proposals for having two chambers rejected.....	187
		This determination much censured.....	188
		Debates on the royal sanction.....	188
		Prevalence of debating clubs in Paris and their baneful influence.....	188
		Discussions on the veto, whether absolute or suspensive.....	188
		The court avails itself of these agitations.....	189
		The royal family meditate a flight to Metz.....	189
		Preparations made for this event.....	189
		Conduct of the queen in this instance.....	189
		The fête given to the military, on the 1st of October, at Versailles.....	189
		Is renewed two days afterward.....	190
		Effect of these things on the Parisians.....	190
		Insurrection of Paris on the 5th of October—want of bread.....	190
		An immense mob proceeds to Versailles.....	190
		Discussions of the assembly on the queen's conduct.....	190
		Terror of the court on the arrival of the mob.....	191
		The flight of the king prevented.....	191
		Arrival of La Fayette with the army of Paris.....	191
		He succeeds in re-establishing order at Versailles for the night.....	191
		Attack on the king's palace the following morning.....	191
		La Fayette disperses the assailants.....	192
		The mob reassembles, and demands to see the king.....	192
		They insist on his going to Paris, with which he complies.....	192
		La Fayette conciliates the body-guard.....	192
		The king and queen, &c. arrive at Paris.....	192

LETTER XVII.

View of the State of Parties in France—The Constituent Assembly—The Clergy and the Noblesse—The Orleans Party—Constitutional Labours; Declaration of Rights; Permanence and Unity of the legislative Body; royal Sanction; external Agitation; Insurrection of the 5th and 6th of October, 1789—The King removes his Residence to Paris.

Effects of the revolution in the provinces..... 182
These evils not fairly chargeable on the national assembly..... 182
Something of them must accompany all revolutions..... 183
The national assembly comprised the ablest men in the nation..... 183
View of the parties into which it was divided..... 183
Abbé Maury and Cazalès represented the clergy and noblesse..... 183
The leading object of these two orators..... 183
The party of Necker and the ministry described..... 184
These latter termed the monarchists, or moderate party..... 184
The republican or national party..... 184
The leaders of this party described..... 184
Character and talents of Dupont..... 185
Character and talents of the abbé Siéyès..... 185
Character and talents of Mirabeau..... 185
Character and talents of the duke of Orleans..... 186
The assembly divided into committees..... 186
Renewal of the declaration of rights..... 186
On the organization of the legislative power..... 187
Of the power of the sovereign in the state..... 187
Proposals for having two chambers rejected..... 187
This determination much censured..... 188
Debates on the royal sanction..... 188
Prevalence of debating clubs in Paris and their baneful influence..... 188
Discussions on the veto, whether absolute or suspensive..... 188
The court avails itself of these agitations..... 189
The royal family meditate a flight to Metz..... 189
Preparations made for this event..... 189
Conduct of the queen in this instance..... 189
The fête given to the military, on the 1st of October, at Versailles..... 189
Is renewed two days afterward..... 190
Effect of these things on the Parisians..... 190
Insurrection of Paris on the 5th of October—want of bread..... 190
An immense mob proceeds to Versailles..... 190
Discussions of the assembly on the queen's conduct..... 190
Terror of the court on the arrival of the mob..... 191
The flight of the king prevented..... 191
Arrival of La Fayette with the army of Paris..... 191
He succeeds in re-establishing order at Versailles for the night..... 191
Attack on the king's palace the following morning..... 191
La Fayette disperses the assailants..... 192
The mob reassembles, and demands to see the king..... 192
They insist on his going to Paris, with which he complies..... 192
La Fayette conciliates the body-guard..... 192
The king and queen, &c. arrive at Paris..... 192

CONTENTS.

LETTER XVIII.

The French Revolution continued—Consequence of the Events of October, 1789—Benefices of the Clergy proclaimed national Property—Issues of Assignats—Anniversary of the 14th of July—Abolition of Tithes—Federation of the Champ-de-Mars—New Organization of the Army—Schism of the Clergy—Clubs—Death of Mirabeau, &c. A. D. 1789, 1790.

Difficulties which the national assembly had to encounter..... 192
Secession of Mounier from the assembly..... 193
The national assembly removes its sittings to the metropolis..... 193
The duke of Orleans exiled to England..... 193
The Parisians rendered tumultuous by the want of bread..... 193
Martial law proclaimed..... 193
Division of France into eighty-three departments, districts, and cantons..... 193
Manner of electing delegates..... 194
Regulations of the commune..... 194
Some of the states protest against the division of the realm..... 194
Disaffection of the ancient régime..... 194
The noblesse and the clergy attack the new order of things..... 194
Financial difficulties which Necker had to surmount..... 194
Mirabeau obtains for him a financial dictatorship..... 195
A bold effort to ward off a national bankruptcy..... 195
The property of the church seized for the use of the state..... 195
Remarks on this revolutionary measure..... 195
The abolition of tithes sanctioned by the archbishop of Paris..... 195
Talleyrand proposes the confiscation of ecclesiastical benefices..... 196
Violent clamours of the clergy against this measure..... 196
The treasury calls for the sale of church property..... 196
First issue of assignats..... 196
Their favourable operation on the revolution at the moment..... 196
Conduct of the clergy on this occasion..... 197
The assembly propose a reconstitution of the church..... 197
The plan in detail..... 197
The decree passes, and the clergy withdraw from the assembly..... 197
A league formed between the clergy and the dissident noblesse..... 197
Their united efforts to oppose the projected reform..... 197
Speeches of Chapelier—Maury—Mirabeau, voting the session permanent..... 198
Counter-revolutionary efforts out of the assembly..... 198
Correspondence of the count d'Artois..... 198
Equivocal and embarrassed conduct of the court..... 199
Mirabeau intrigues with it..... 199
Proceedings of the national assembly..... 199
The sovereignty of the nation recognised..... 199
The power of war or peace vested in the king..... 200
Anniversary of the destruction of the bastille, 14th of July..... 200
Decree of the abolition of tithes, &c. &c..... 200
Hostility of the aristocracy to this measure..... 200
Conduct of Louis XVI. on the 14th of July..... 200
Description of the fête of the Champ-de-Mars..... 200
Taking the oath of federation, &c..... 201
The king and his subjects apparently reconciled..... 201
Festivities prolonged after the 14th of July..... 201
Recommencement of the hostility of parties..... 201
Necker quits his station in disgust, and retires from France..... 202
The noblesse pursue counter-revolutionary measures..... 202

They organize a plan of emigration..... 202
General Bouillé disaffected to the revolution, his conduct..... 202
Speculations of the aristocratical party, on the revolution..... 202
The pope refuses to sanction the alienation of church property and other things..... 203
The clergy required to take the civic oath—many refuse..... 203
Ejection of the nonconforming incumbents..... 203
Unpleasant consequences throughout the departments..... 203
Sovereignty of the people, and origin of clubs..... 203
The jacobin club—the club of eighty-nine—monarchic club, &c..... 204
Distrust of the people, and their apprehension of a counter-revolution..... 204
Failure of an attempt to carry off the king..... 204
La Fayette disarms the counter-revolutionists..... 204
Reasons for thinking the king meditated an escape..... 204
Decree of the assembly to counteract it..... 204
Death of Mirabeau—his funeral—and estimate of his character..... 205
The national assembly complete the reorganization of France..... 205

LETTER XIX.

The French Revolution continued—Coalition of the European Courts against it—Flight of Louis XVI.—His Arrest and Suspension—Declaration of Pillnitz—Termination of the Constituent Assembly. A. D. 1791.

1789 Effects of the French revolution on the politics of Europe..... 205
Retrospect of the state of Europe previous to the revolution..... 206
Of Prussia and Russia at this period..... 206
The French revolution threatens all the monarchies of Europe..... 206
1790 Formation of a general coalition..... 206
This measure encouraged by the emigrant princes..... 207
The count d'Artois and the emperor Leopold..... 207
1791 Declaration of Mantua, May the 20th..... 207
Louis XVI. places great confidence in general Bouillé..... 207
The royal family make their escape on the 20th of June..... 207
Consternation of the Parisians on hearing it..... 207
Prudent conduct of the assembly..... 207
Arrival of the king and queen at Varennes..... 208
They are recognised and detained..... 208
Bouillé marches an army to release them..... 208
He fails in his object and quits the army and France..... 208
The royal pair return to Paris under arrest..... 208
Three commissioners from the assembly meet them at Eprenay..... 208
The king provisionally suspended..... 208
Struggle of the republican and other parties..... 208
Commissaries appointed to interrogate Louis XVI..... 209
Discussions on delivering in their report..... 209
Barnave's speech on this occasion..... 209
The assembly decree the king's abdication of the crown..... 209
Conduct of the republican party..... 209
La Fayette protects the assembly from its fury..... 210
His troops fire upon the mob and disperse them..... 210
Discomfiture of the emigrants on hearing of the king's arrest..... 210
Meeting at Pillnitz, and the treaty entered into..... 210
The confederated princes issue a declaration..... 210
Effects of this declaration on the French people..... 210
The national assembly terminates its labours..... 211
None of its members eligible to re-election—an unhappy measure..... 211
La Fayette and Bailly retire from their posts..... 211
Proceedings of the constituent assembly..... 211
The king's suspension taken off, and Louis restored to power..... 211

	Page
The scenes of pillage and bloodshed begin to dis-	306
gust	299
Robespierre aware of his increasing unpopularity	299
His political finesse and studied austerity of manners	299
His agent, Payan, checks the licentiousness of the times	299
Robespierre censures profane swearing	300
And affects to be a reformer of morals	300
Couthon's decree for extending the powers of the revolutionary tribunal	300
Remarks on the terrible consequences of this decree	300
Effect of its announcement in the convention	300
The decree is opposed, but ultimately passed into a law	300
Mortal war between Robespierre and the leaders in the convention	301
A schism takes place among his own friends	301
Robespierre seeks for allies among the Girondists, in vain	301
His popularity in the jacobin club, and complaint of being persecuted	301
He recommends a purification of the society	301
Tries his strength with the judges of the revolutionary tribunal	301
He delays his grand attack for six weeks	301
Vadier's dexterous attack on a sect patronised by Robespierre	301
Robespierre feels his insecure standing, and hesitates what to do	302
A singular disclosure made by an anonymous letter	302
Robespierre determines to try his fate with the convention	302
His first speech is an eulogium on his own virtues	302
A motion is made to print the discourse	302
A stormy debate ensues, and he sees his approaching fall	302, 303
His recourse to the jacobin club	303
Anecdote of the celebrated David, the painter	303
Payan proposes to march against the two committees	303
The jacobins expel several leading members from their club	303
They prepare a report on the speech of Robespierre	303
The parties fairly at issue, and the fall of the dictator foreseen	303
Extraordinary occurrences of 9th Thermidor (27th of July)	303
Robespierre appears in the convention, and finds his adversaries in array	304
Description of the two parties	304
St. Just makes the report on the speech of Robespierre	304
St. Just is forced from the tribune	304
Speech of Billaud Varennes on the proceedings in the jacobin club	304
He denounces Robespierre as a second Catiline	304
The convention applauds, and Robespierre attempts to reply	304
Tallien moves the denunciation of Robespierre, and arrest of Henriot, &c.	304
A dreadful scene of confusion, clamour, and contention ensues	304
Picture of the defeated tyrant at this instant	305
His complete and final overthrow	305
Arrest of the two Robespierres, Couthon, and St. Just, &c.	305
The officers of justice hesitate to lay hands on the tyrant	305
Sitting of the convention voted permanent	305
Henriot marches an armed force against the convention	306
He is arrested by the gens-d'armes	306
The jailers refuse to receive the arrested deputies	306
Alarmed state of Paris at this juncture	306
Payan musters a sufficient force to release Robespierre	306
The tyrant is rendered incapable of exertion	306
Proceedings of the convention	306
Impending catastrophe ultimately surmounted	306
The public voice declares against the terrorists	306
The leaders reproach each other for want of exertion	307
Death of Henriot, Le Bas, the two Robespierres, St. Just, and others	307
Description of the horrible state of the elder Robespierre	307
Execrations poured on the latter	307
Sketch of his character	307
Epitaph for his tombstone	308
LETTER XXVI.
Affairs of Republican France—Napoleon Buonaparte, his Birth and early Habits—appointed Lieutenant of Artillery—promoted to the Rank of Captain—Siege of Toulon—Buonaparte compels the allied Troops to evacuate it—Is appointed Chief of Battalion in the army of Italy—supersedes in Command—goes to Paris, in May, 1795, to solicit Employment, but is unsuccessful—at length succeeds Menou in the Command of the Conventional Troops—Is made second in Command of the interior—afterward General-in-chief—marries Madame Beauharnois—joins the Army of Italy. A. D. 1793—1796.
The first appearance of Napoleon Buonaparte	308
Place of his birth, nativity, and family	308
His education and early habits	308, 309
Pichegru's remark concerning him	309
1783 Is elected inspector of the twelve military schools	309
His acquaintance with abbé Raynal	309
Receives a commission as second lieutenant of artillery	309
Description of his person	309
Vacillates in his patriotic views	309
1792 Becomes a captain in the artillery	309
Distinguishes himself at the siege of Toulon	309
Importance of Toulon to the belligerents	310
Lord Mulgrave commands the troops there	310
Particulars of its attack and defence	310
The slow progress of the siege discourages the French	310
Buonaparte is sent to assist at it	311
His objection to the plan pursued by general Cartaux	311
His advice at a council of war	311
His advice is taken and his plans adopted	311
General Doppet supersedes Cartaux	312
Anecdote of Doppet, who is succeeded by Dugommier	312
Anecdote of Buonaparte	312
Juno's first appearance in the arena	312
And general Duroc's	312
Buonaparte is thwarted by the commissioners from Paris	312
He hastens his operations	312
A sally is made from the garrison	313
The British troops are thrown into confusion	313
General O'Hara is wounded and taken prisoner	313
Batteries opened on fort Mulgrave	313
The fort ultimately taken by the French	313
Buonaparte's account of the commissioners	313
The allied troops resolve to evacuate Toulon	313
The British fleet receives the inhabitants	314
The arsenal, naval stores, and ships in harbour are destroyed	314
Activity of sir Sidney Smith on the occasion	314
Tremendous scene which now presented itself	314
Dreadful explosion of two saqs laden with gunpowder	314
The British fleet leaves Toulon	314
The star of Napoleon now first ascends above the horizon	314
Triumph of the jacobins on the capture of Toulon	314
Buonaparte's conduct on this occasion	314
He is recommended for promotion	315
Is made chief of battalion, and joins the army of Italy	315
His first achievements on joining the army	315

	Page
Recommends to the convention a plan which gives alarm	315
His reflections on the fall of Robespierre	316
His difficult situation at this time	316
Returns to Paris in May, 1795	316
His application for employment opposed	316
Applies to Barras and Freron—his proposal to them	316
State of the national convention at this period	317
Defects in the different constitutions	317
Prevailing influence of the Thermidoriens	317
Speculations for resuming the monarchy	317
Commissioners appointed for drawing up a new constitution	318
Appointment of five directors	318
The executive divided into two councils—that of elders and of the five hundred	319
Their respective qualifications	319
1795 Remarks on the constitution of the year 3	319
Its advantages annulled by the Thermidoriens	319
The plans of the latter meet with strong opposition	319
The sections of Paris oppose the convention	320
The parties prepare for hostilities	320
General Danican succeeded by Menou in the command of the national force	321
Menou is suspected and placed under arrest	321
Buonaparte's appointment to the command of the troops	321
His skilful arrangements for meeting the storm	321
Affray of the sections, 5th of October, 1795	321
Victory decides in favour of the convention	322
Prudent use of this success by the victors	322
Barras calls attention to the skill of Buonaparte	322
Proceedings of the convention	322
A new directory chosen—their names	322
Buonaparte raised to the office of commander-in-chief	323
His first acquaintance with madame Beauharnois	323
Eugene solicits from him his father's sword	323
Description of Eugene's mother	323
Her intimacy with Barras and Tallien	323
Buonaparte solicits her in marriage	324
Which took place on the 9th of March, 1796	324
Reflections on this occurrence	324
LETTER XXVII.
Affairs of Great Britain from the Commencement of the War with France—she sends an Army into Flanders—subsidizes Prussia—has a Dispute with America—bad State of her domestic Politics—Lord Howe defeats the French Fleet—ill Success of the Duke of York—Miseries of his retreating Army—Austria subsidized—English Expedition to the Coast of France—Tumultuous Proceedings in the Metropolis—Lord Malmesbury sent to Paris to negotiate a Peace. A. D. 1793—1796.
Introductory remarks	324
Mistaken policy of England in going to war	324
Provocations on the part of France	325
1793 Meeting of the British parliament	325
Correspondence of Monsieur Chauvelin and lord Grenville	325
Intelligence received of the death of Louis XVI	326
England resolves to send an army into the Netherlands	326
The troops under the command of the duke of York land at Helvoetsluys	326
The French defeated at Famars	326
The duke of York attacks Dunkirk	326
Drives the French into the town	326
Commences the siege of Dunkirk	326
Non-arrival of the naval force from England	326
The enemy's gun-boats enfilade the British encampment	326
The British obliged to abandon the siege	327
Disastrous effects of their retreat	327
The Austrian general Wurmser forces the lines of Weissenbourg, &c.	327
The French reinforced compel Wurmser and the duke of Brunswick to retreat	327
The Austrians compelled to recross the Rhine	327
The campaign closes successfully to the French	327
Meeting of the British parliament, 21st of January, 1794	327
The opposition recommend negotiations for peace	328
Grounds of discussion pro and con	328
Speech of the marquis of Lansdowne, 17th of February	328
Landing of Hessian troops in the isle of Wight	329
Great Britain obliged to subsidize the continental powers	329
Speculations for resuming the monarchy	329
Debate on the Prussian alliance	329
Contest with the American states	330
Arrival of Mr. Jay, the American minister	330
The dispute compromised	330
Progress of democracy in England and Scotland	330
Muir and Palmer sentenced to transportation	331
Societies formed in England	331
Trials of Hardy, Tooke, and Thelwall	331
Naval preparations at Brest	331
Lord Howe engages and defeats the French fleet, 1st of June, 1794	332
Particulars of his victory	332
Operations of the French armies	333
The duke of York defeats Pichegru, with great slaughter	333
The emperor of Austria takes the command of his army	333
Joins the duke of York in the Netherlands	333
Their armies defeated	333
Skilful retreat of the duke of York	333
The duke joined by lord Moira, at Antwerp, with ten thousand troops	333
Detailed account of their campaign	334
The Belgians every where are opposed to the Austrians	334
Campaign on the frontiers of Germany	334
Retreat of the Austrians and Prussians	334
The emperor of Germany gives up the command of his army, and returns to Vienna	334
The duke of Brunswick's letter to the king of Prussia	334
Reflections on that letter	335
The emperor of Germany grows sick of the war	335
Liberal subsidy from England to Prussia	335
The French force the Prussian lines at Edickoffern	335
Belgium is given up to the French, and Brabant threatened	335
The duke of York fortifies the barrier towns	336
His contest with Pichegru, 14th of September	336
The duke retreats under the walls of Nimiegueu	336
Is compelled to recross the Waal	336
The frost enables the French armies to cross the rivers	336
They attack the allies, and are every where successful	336
Tremendous issue of the campaign of 1794	336
Melancholy state of the British army	336
Their retreat under lord Cathcart and general Abercrombie	337
Pichegru's career through the Dutch provinces	337
Flight of the stadtholder, and his reception in England	337
Holland and Belgium become an appendage to France	337
The king of Prussia retires from the coalition	338
The landgrave of Hesse copies his example	338
These secessions announced to the British parliament	338
1795 Expedition to the coast of France	338
Landing at Quiberon bay	338
Miserable result of this expedition	339
1795 Domestic occurrences of Britain	339
Meeting of parliament, 29th of October	339
Outrages to the king in his way to parliament	339
Proceedings in the commons consequent thereon	340
The king and his ministers receive a lesson from the mob	340
France and Holland attack the commerce of England	340

England attempts to regain Prussia to the coalition.....	340
Lord Malmesbury sent to Paris to negotiate a peace.....	340
Unsuccessful issue of the negotiation.....	341

LETTER XXVIII.

Italian Campaign—Bonaparte marches towards Italy—Battle of Monte Notte—Defeat of the Austrian General Provera—Retreat of the allied Armies—Battle of Millesimo—The French Army enters Piedmont—The King of Sardinia requests an Armistice—The French enter the Milanese Country—Death of General La Harpe—Battle of Lodi—Bonaparte enters Milan—The Pope obliged to purchase an Armistice—And the Duke of Modena—The French plunder the Country of its finest Pieces of Statuary and Painting—Reflections on this act of Spoliation. A. D. 1796.
---	--

Preliminary remarks.....	341
The French armies cross the Alps.....	341
Bonaparte is accompanied by the deputy Sallucetti.....	341
Bonaparte's address to the army of Italy.....	342
His novel plan of invading the country.....	342
Beaulieu commands the Austrian army.....	342
He hastens to protect Genoa against Bonaparte.....	342
1796 Operations of the Austrian army, April the 10th.....	343
Battle of Monte Notte—first victory of Bonaparte.....	343
Beaulieu's situation in consequence.....	343
Advance of the French army.....	343
Attack on the Austrian general Provera at Millesimo.....	344
Napoleon attacks general Colli at Cossaria.....	344
Massena attacks the heights of Biastro.....	344
Retreat of the Austrians who retire upon D'Aqui.....	344
The Austrians drive the French from Deگو.....	344
Battle of Millesimo renewed.....	344
Disastrous issue to the Austrians.....	345
Bonaparte defeats the Sardinian general Colli.....	345
He fixes his head-quarters at Ceva.....	345
His reflections on contemplating the fertile fields of Piedmont.....	345
Colli attacked at Mondovi.....	345
Murat compels the Sardinians to retreat.....	345
Bonaparte takes possession of Cherasco.....	345
Recapitulation of Bonaparte's successes during the last month.....	345
The king of Sardinia's situation described.....	346
He sues for an armistice, which is agreed to at Cherasco.....	346
Negotiations for peace with the French directory.....	346
Death of Victor Amadeus, who is succeeded by his son.....	346
Close of the Piedmontese campaign, and estimates of Napoleon's talents.....	346
He now gazes on Italy with an eagle's eye.....	346
He determines to advance against Venice, Tuscany, &c.....	347
Efforts of Austria to defend her Italian dominions.....	347
The directory are jealous of Bonaparte and withhold reinforcements.....	347
His address to the army respecting the projected attack on Milan.....	347
He fixes his head quarters at Tortona.....	347
Prepares for the passage of the Po.....	347
Beaulieu determines to oppose their passage.....	347
Bonaparte's manœuvre to deceive Beaulieu.....	348
He deceives the latter by a feigned effort at Valenza.....	348
During which he makes a forced march to Piacenza.....	348
The French army cross to the left bank of the Po, May the 7th.....	348
Tardy movements of Beaulieu, who now marches to Piacenza.....	348
Bonaparte moves his army forward towards Casal.....	349

The Austrians throw themselves into Fombio, and prepare to fortify it.....	349
The French carry the place at the bayonet's point.....	349
Death of the French general la Harpe.....	349
Napoleon's remark to the directory on crossing the Po.....	349
He crosses the Adda and prepares for the battle of Lodi.....	349
Description of the town—important to the French to take it.....	349
Celerity of Bonaparte's movements.....	349
He proceeds towards Lodi, May the 10th.....	350
Has a skirmish with the Austrian rear-guard.....	350
Prepares for passing the bridge of Lodi.....	350
Particulars of this memorable event.....	350
Reflections on this important measure.....	351
Bonaparte's object in this daring exploit.....	351
Disastrous issue to the Austrians.....	352
Bonaparte's interview with the old Hungarian officer.....	352
Conduct of the people of Milan at this time.....	352
The archduke Ferdinand quits the city with tears.....	352
The Milanese prepare for the reception of the French.....	352
Bonaparte's triumphant entry into Milan, May the 14th.....	352
Planting the tree of liberty, &c.....	352
Contributions levied on the city.....	353
Situation of Naples and Lombardy prior to the French invasion.....	353
Tuscany and Venice in league with the French republic.....	353
Yet Bonaparte determines to treat them as enemies.....	354
His treatment to the duke of Parma.....	354
And of Modena.....	354
The latter purchases the privilege of neutrality.....	354
Spoliations committed by the French on their works of taste.....	354
Reflections on the conduct of Bonaparte in this instance.....	354
A museum founded at Paris for the reception of these spoliations.....	355
The duke of Modena and the picture of St. Jerome.....	356
Napoleon's despatch to the directory.....	356
Speech of the secretary-general of the lyceum.....	356
The conduct of the French condemned in these acts of spoliation.....	357

LETTER XXIX.

Prosecution of the Campaign in Italy—Insurrection at Pavia—Defeat of the Austrians at Borghetto—Mantua blockaded—Invasion of the Venetian States—The King of Naples secedes from Austria—Armistice purchased by the Pope—Neutrality of Tuscany violated—Leghorn occupied by the French—Wurmser succeeds Beaulieu—Corsica reunited to France—Battles of Arcola, and Success of the French. A. D. 1795.
Introductory remarks.....	358
State of the belligerent powers.....	358
Bonaparte receives despatches from the directory.....	358
They propose to divide the command of the army of Italy.....	358
He disapproves of the plan, and offers to resign.....	358
The directory gives way, and he retains the sole command.....	359
He fixes his head-quarters at Lodi, May the 24th.....	359
Insurrection at Pavia, and a French corps made prisoners.....	359
Causes which induced this insurrection.....	359
Bonaparte marches his troops to put down this insurrection.....	359
Inflicts a severe chastisement on the leading insurgents.....	359
Proclamation of the French general on this occasion.....	359
Execution of the leaders—Lago is taken by storm and pillaged.....	360

Napoleon's conduct compared with the duke of Brunswick's manifesto.....	360
He advances to Brescia, and again deceives Beaulieu.....	360
Passage of the Mincio, May the 30th.....	360
Beaulieu retreats behind the Adige.....	360
Bonaparte narrowly escapes being taken at Valleggio.....	361
Consequences of the French crossing the Mincio.....	361
They prepare to take Mantua.....	361
The situation of the place described.....	361
Bonaparte blockades the town.....	361
His negotiation with the government of Venice.....	362
Louis XVIII. (then count de Lisle) then resident at Verona.....	362
The directory insist on his quitting the Venetian territory.....	362
Other emigrants also compelled to fly.....	362
Bonaparte's threat to the people of Verona.....	362
The Venetians stipulate for their neutrality.....	362
The defection of the king of Naples.....	363
The pope threatened with hostilities.....	363
The French army occupies Ferrara and Bologna.....	363
The papal troops made prisoners by the French.....	363
The pope negotiates, through the Spanish minister Azara.....	363
Terms of the negotiation.....	363
The archduke of Tuscany undergoes republican discipline.....	364
Bonaparte seizes on Leghorn.....	364
The British merchant vessels narrowly escape his grasp.....	364
Napoleon's simile of the giant and the dwarf.....	364
Conduct of Austria under the loss of her dominions.....	365
Beaulieu is recalled, and replaced by general Melas.....	365
Bonaparte's anxiety to gain possession of Mantua.....	365
The failure of a scheme obliges him to open trenches.....	365
Noble defence of the place by the Austrians.....	365
Carnot's plan of the campaign of 1796.....	365
Disposition of the armies for carrying it into execution.....	366
Moreau and Jourdan march into the heart of Germany.....	366
The archduke Charles commands the Austrian army in Germany.....	366
Operations of the hostile armies in Germany and on the Rhine.....	366
General Wurmser musters his army on the district of Tyrol.....	366
He marches against Bonaparte, and to relieve Mantua.....	367
Fatal error in the Austrian plan of operation.....	367
Bonaparte takes advantage of it, and attacks Quasdonovich.....	367
Is compelled to raise the siege of Mantua with loss.....	367
Bonaparte defeats two Austrian armies.....	367
The Austrians retreat towards the Tyrol.....	367
Wurmser attempts a communication with Quasdonovich.....	368
Battle of Lonato, July 30th.....	368
Defeat of the Austrians, and consequent confusion of their army.....	368
Singular occurrence to Bonaparte at Lonato.....	369
Four thousand Austrians surrender to less than one thousand French.....	369
Wurmser musters his forces and attacks the French near Lonato.....	369
He throws supplies into Mantua, but is again defeated.....	369
Effect of those repeated defeats on the spirit of his army.....	370
Severe losses of the Austrians.....	370
Napoleon resumes the siege of Mantua.....	370
Effect of this campaign on the states of Italy.....	370
Inflexibility of Austria during these reverses.....	370
Wurmser again advances from the Tyrol to relieve Mantua.....	370

Bonaparte permits his advance, that himself may attack Davidowich.....	370
Battle of Roveredo, September the 4th.....	371
Death of the French general Dubois.....	371
Difficulties surmounted by the French.....	371
Destruction of Davidowich's army.....	371
Massena takes possession of Trent in the Tyrol.....	371
Bonaparte becomes desirous of conciliating the Tyrolese.....	371
He issues an edict annexing the principality of Trent to France.....	371
Attachment of the Tyrolese to the house of Austria.....	372
Bonaparte fails to ingratiate himself with them.....	372
He begins his operations against Wurmser.....	372
The latter adopts an ill-concerted plan for relieving Mantua.....	372
Unwisely separates himself from a large part of his army.....	372
Bonaparte, by a forced march, attacks his advanced guard.....	373
He takes Wurmser by surprise and penetrates the Austrian lines.....	373
He destroys Wurmser's vanguard and takes four thousand prisoners.....	373
Battle of Bassano, September the 8th, a decisive victory for the French.....	373
Detail of the operations and terrible consequences to Austria.....	373
Wurmser resolves to throw himself into Mantua.....	373
Favourable occurrence for Wurmser, who gains the right bank of the Adige.....	374
He occupies the village of Legnago.....	374
He is pursued by Bonaparte, who meditates his destruction.....	374
Wurmser defeats the French at Corea.....	374
Bonaparte arrives, and is nearly taken prisoner.....	374
Wurmser gives orders for a pursuit, but is unsuccessful.....	374
Is repeatedly successful, and forms a communication with Mantua.....	374, 375
Bonaparte forces his way into the islet of the Seraglio.....	375
A severe and sanguinary action ensues.....	375
Wurmser throws himself into Mantua.....	375
Wretched state of the place at this time.....	375
Speech of the minister of war to the directory at this period.....	375
Bonaparte succeeds in reuniting Corsica to France.....	375
His critical situation at this time.....	375
Position of the hostile powers.....	375, 376
Austria assembles two armies on the Italian frontier.....	376
The command of both placed under marshal Alvinzi.....	376
Disposition of the armies on either side.....	376
Bonaparte issues his orders for attack, October, 1796.....	376
He determines to give battle to Alvinzi.....	377
His first encounter of doubtful issue.....	377
He retreats from Bassano to Vicenza and Verona.....	377
The Austrians negligent in improving their advantages.....	377
Bonaparte displeased with his own troops, and chides them.....	377
Alvinzi occupies the heights of Caldiero.....	378
Preparations for the battle of Arcola.....	378
Its situation described, and Bonaparte's reasons for attacking it.....	378
He commences his march from Verona at nightfall.....	378
Movement of the armies towards Arcola.....	378
Augereau with his chosen grenadiers fails to carry the bridge.....	379
Napoleon seizes a stand of colours and rushes on the bridge.....	379
His perilous plight at this moment.....	379
The bridge is finally carried, and the Austrians driven from Arcola.....	379

He accepts the new constitution, and pledges himself to support it.....	211
La Fayette obtains a decree of amnesty in favour of the king's friends.....	211
Speech of Louis on dissolving the constituent assembly.....	211
His momentary popularity.....	212
Praises of the constituent assembly.....	212
Remarks on the constitution of 1791.....	212

LETTER XX.

The French Revolution continued—National legislative Assembly—State of Parties—The Emigration, and the refractory Clergy—War declared against Austria. A. D. 1792.

1791 Institution of the national legislative assembly.....	213
The members take the oath to preserve the constitution, and begin their labours.....	213
Coolness between the king and assembly.....	213
Discussion on the way in which Louis should be addressed.....	214
First meeting between the king and the assembly.....	214
His majesty's speech on opening the session.....	214
Composition of the assembly, and the factions opposed to it.....	215
The party of the Feuillans described.....	215
The party of the Girondists.....	215
The party of the Champ-de-Mars.....	215
Difficulties which the legislative assembly had to encounter.....	216
Proceedings of the refractory clergy.....	216
Religious dissensions very prevalent.....	216
Revolt in the departments of Calvados and La Vendée.....	217
Brisot proposes to check the emigration.....	217
He is opposed by Isnard.....	217
Proceedings of the constitutionalists.....	217
Decree of the assembly respecting the king's eldest brother.....	217
The emigrants required to return, on pain of outlawry.....	217
Conduct of the monarch in these instances.....	218
He is supported by the constitutionalists.....	218
The court intrigues—Bertrand de Molleville establishes a French club.....	218
The hands of the constitutionalists weakened thereby.....	218
Ascendency of the Girondists.....	219
Conduct of the electors of Treves, Mentz, &c.....	219
The king is requested to interpose with those courts to disperse their meetings.....	219
Speech of Isnard in favour of the project.....	219
Decree of the assembly, and Vaublanc's address to the king.....	219
Louis XVI. promises a compliance.....	220
Military preparations are resorted to.....	220
Proceedings against the king's three brothers.....	220
Three French armies marched to the frontiers.....	220
The elector of Treves retraces his steps.....	220
Austria supports the elector.....	220
She marches her armies to the frontier.....	220
The assembly demand from the emperor an explanation of his designs.....	220
Measures adopted against the members of the council.....	221
The king intimidated by these measures.....	221
He chooses his new ministers from among the Girondists.....	221
Names of the new ministers.....	221
Character of Dumouriez, minister for foreign affairs.....	221
Character of Roland, minister of the interior.....	221
The ministry termed by the court the sans-culottes ministry.....	222
Death of the emperor Leopold, and accession of Francis II.....	222
Austria demands the re-establishment of the monarchy in France.....	222
The prospect of war daily increases.....	222
Louis XVI. appears in the assembly, and reports on the state of the nation.....	222

War declared against Austria, 20th of April, 1792..... 223

LETTER XXI.

The French Revolution continued—France prepares for War—Disasters of the Army—Decree of Banishment against the nonjuring Clergy—Fall of the Girondists—Duke of Brunswick's Manifesto—Events of the 10th of August—The Prussian Army invades France—Massacre of the 2d of September—Retreat of the combined Armies. A. D. 1792.

1792 The declaration of war favourably received in France.....	223
Arrangements for the campaign.....	223
Appointment of the generals and their armies.....	223
Rochambeau and Dumouriez differ in their plans.....	223
Disastrous outset—the troops under Dillon are panic-stricken, and massacre their commander.....	224
The same happens to Biron and his army.....	224
Rochambeau resigns the command.....	224
The French resolve to act upon the defensive.....	224
Effect of this first check on the parties in France.....	224
The court is suspected of sinister measures.....	224
Proceedings of the assembly on this occasion.....	224
The refractory priests are banished.....	224
The constitutionalists oppose their measures.....	225
Conduct of Louis XVI.....	225
Roland sets before him his constitutional duties.....	225
Dumouriez countenances the king's measures.....	225
Louis dismisses his ministers, and chooses new ones.....	225
He sends Mallet Dupan on a secret mission to the coalition.....	225
The revolution retrogrades.....	225
Active proceedings of the different clubs.....	225
La Fayette denounces the jacobins.....	226
Who now attack his character.....	226
The Girondists endeavour to support the king and constitution.....	226
The multitude march to the hall of assembly.....	226
They are allowed to present an insurrectionary petition.....	226
The mob quits the hall and marches to the king's palace.....	227
Extraordinary interview between the king and them.....	227
Pétion succeeds in dispersing the multitude.....	227
Complaints against the authors of this tumult.....	227
The generals wish to remove the king from Paris.....	227
La Fayette returns to Paris, and appears in the assembly.....	228
He is attacked by the jacobin leaders.....	228
His hopes now placed on the national guard.....	228
His object is to rescue the king and disperse the jacobin club.....	228
He returns disappointed to the army.....	228
Report of the state of France—the country in danger.....	228
Speech of Vergniaud on this occasion.....	228
Speech of Brissot, who attacks the conduct of the king.....	229
The assembly proclaims the country to be in danger.....	229
Measures taken for its defence.....	229
Pétion is deposed and restored.....	230
The attacks on La Fayette increase daily.....	230
Hostilities break out among the parties.....	230
March of the Prussians, and the duke of Brunswick's manifesto.....	230
State of the confederated armies, and of the French.....	230
Duke of Brunswick's plan of the campaign.....	230
Substance of his manifesto.....	230
This document both violent and impolitic.....	231
It hastens the fall of Louis XVI. and defeats the object of the coalition.....	231
It united the discordant parties in France.....	231
The jacobin party prepare for an insurrection in Paris.....	231
Agitated state of the city.....	231
The clubs discuss the dethronement of the king.....	231

The assembly protect La Fayette from the jacobins.....	232
The sections demand the deposition of Louis, or threaten vengeance.....	232
The civil authorities destitute of power.....	232
Projected attack on the palace, 10th of August.....	232
The court apprized of its danger—its means of defence.....	232
The insurrection commences at midnight.....	232
Discussions of the legislative body.....	232
Pétion is removed, and Santerre takes command of the national guard.....	233
The court regret the loss of Pétion.....	233
The king reviews the national guard.....	233
Unhappy situation of the monarch.....	233
He is attacked by the insurgents—but escapes to his palace.....	233
The insurgents increase and arm themselves.....	233
Their advance to the Tuileries—and Roderer's parley with them.....	233
Conservation of the king and his council.....	234
Roderer's advice to the royal family.....	234
The queen's behaviour at this juncture.....	234
The royal family leave the Tuileries, and are conducted to the hall of the assembly.....	234
Louis's address on entering the hall.....	234
Vergniaud's reply to the monarch.....	234
Conduct of the military and insurgents.....	234
Massacre of the Swiss guards.....	235
Confusion of the assembly—the fate of the monarchy decided.....	235
The assembly issue a proclamation.....	235
The mob demand the dethronement of the king.....	235
Vergniaud proposes the convocation of a national convention.....	235
The assembly adopts the measure.....	235
Louis XVI. is sent to the temple as a prisoner.....	235
Conduct of the armies and their generals respecting these proceedings.....	236
La Fayette still desirous of saving the monarchy and constitution.....	236
He arrests the three commissaries sent from the assembly.....	236
Critical situation of La Fayette at this period.....	236
He abandons the army with some officers of his staff.....	237
Determines to proceed to America.....	237
Falls into the hands of the Austrians, and sent to the prison of Olmutz.....	237
His harsh treatment during four years' captivity.....	237
Sketch of his estimable character.....	237
Conduct of the dominant party in Paris.....	237
Appointment of an extraordinary criminal tribunal.....	238
Its progress too slow for the wishes of the commune.....	238
Danton takes the lead in the revolutionary party.....	238
Character of Danton—compared with Mirabeau.....	238
Advance of the Prussians into France—Verdun bombarded.....	238
Speech of Danton on this occasion.....	238
His proposition to frighten the royalists.....	239
Domiciliary visits instituted.....	239
Intelligence arrives of the surrender of Verdun to the Prussians.....	239
Massacres of the 2d and 3d of September.....	239
Horrible account of their proceedings.....	239
The executive council at a loss for generals.....	240
Dumouriez appointed to the army of the Moselle.....	240
He arrives at Grandpré and establishes a camp.....	240
Makes arrangements for receiving the Prussians.....	240
The duke of Brunswick passes the Meuse.....	240
Error of Dumouriez, he removes to Sainte-Menehould.....	240, 241
He is reinforced by Kellermann and Bourmonville.....	241
The Prussians attack Kellermann at Valmy.....	241
The Prussians are successfully repulsed.....	241
They become disheartened, are attacked with disease, and forced to retreat.....	241

The duke of Brunswick negotiates with the convention..... 241
Successful issue of the campaign of 1792 to the French..... 241

LETTER XXII.

Progress of the French Revolution—Formation of the National Convention, September, 1792—Contest between the Girondists and Mountainists—Robespierre—Trial of Louis XVI—his Condemnation and Death, December, 1792—January, 1793.

Proceedings of the national convention.....	242
France divided into two parties, the Girondists and the Mountainists.....	242
Struggle between these parties for the ascendancy.....	242
The principles of the Girondists described.....	243
The Mountainists desire a republic.....	243
Their respective places in the assembly.....	243
Girondists the most numerous body in it.....	243
Robespierre appears in the ranks of the Mountainists.....	244
His numerous changes and present principles.....	244
Some account of his talents and character.....	244
He is accused by the Girondists.....	245
The Girondists propose a law against the factions.....	245
The proposal violently opposed by the Mountainists.....	245
Marat, Danton, and Robespierre attacked by the Girondists.....	245
Tamultuous proceedings in the convention.....	245
Attack on Marat—his principles described.....	245
Louvet accuses Robespierre, and denounces his proceedings.....	246
Robespierre asks a delay of eight days to prepare his defence.....	247
He defends himself and becomes head of the Mountainists.....	247
The latter procures a decree of the unity and indivisibility of the republic.....	248
Ascendency of the Mountainists over their opponents.....	248
The jacobin club demands vengeance on Louis Capet.....	249
Unfortunate situation of that monarch.....	249
Accusations against him.....	249
Secret papers discovered at the Tuileries.....	249
This discovery operates unfavourably to the king.....	249
Doubts entertained whether the deposed king could be tried.....	249
Discussions on the subject in the convention.....	249
Speech of St. Just, on this occasion.....	250
The Mountainists are for punishing him without trial.....	250
Robespierre supports the opinion of St. Just.....	251
He demands the condemnation of Louis.....	251
The Girondists succeed in procuring a trial.....	251
Robert Lindet makes his report, in the name of the commission of twenty-one.....	251
Conduct of the unhappy monarch at this trying crisis.....	251
Santerre ordered to conduct him to the bar of the convention.....	251
His appearance on entering the hall described.....	252
His defence of himself, and denial of the charges.....	252
He demands the aid of counsel, and returns to the temple.....	252
Malesherbes volunteers his service as counsel.....	252
Speech of Desèze in behalf of the king.....	252
The Girondists dread the charge of royalism , and waver in their conduct.....	253
They propose to refer the decision to the people at large.....	253
The convention finds Louis guilty.....	253
Sentence of death pronounced by a majority of twenty-six.....	254
Pathetic appeal of his counsel Malesherbes.....	254
His affecting interview with Louis XVI.....	254
The king's last request to him.....	254
Last interview of the unfortunate family.....	254

	Page
He prepares himself for death.....	254
1793 Particulars of his execution, 21st of January.....	254
Reflections on his character and unhappy lot.....	255
LETTER XXIII.
Retrospect of the Affairs of Great Britain, from the Termination of the American War to the Commencement of the French Revolution. A. D. 1783—1793.
1782 Formation of the whig ministry in England.....	255
Death of the marquis of Rockingham.....	255
Mr Burke's eulogy on that nobleman.....	256
Contest between the friends of Mr. Fox and lord Shelburne.....	256
The king raises lord Shelburne to the premiership.....	256
Resignation of Mr. Fox and his friends.....	256
Lord Shelburne's treaty of peace not approved.....	256
He retires from office with Mr. Pitt.....	256
Formation of the "coalition ministry".....	256
Discussion of the affairs of the East India company.....	256
Mr. Fox's East India bills brought into parliament.....	257
Mr. Pitt opposes them violently but unsuccessfully.....	257
Mr. Fox and his friends defend the bills.....	257
Lord Temple prejudices the king against them.....	257
The king dismisses his servants.....	257
Mr. Pitt made first lord of the treasury.....	257
Parliament dissolved, 24th of March, 1784.....	258
New elections favourable to Mr. Pitt.....	258
His measures of finance.....	258
Brings in a new bill for India.....	258
His bill compared with Mr. Fox's.....	258
Death of Samuel Johnson, LL.D. December, 1784.....	259
Estimate of his character and talents.....	259
Parliamentary discussions on the debts of the nabob of Arrot.....	260
Speech of Mr. Burke on this topic.....	260
1785 Mr. Burke is called upon to make good his charge against Warren Hastings, Esq.....	261
1786 Mr. Burke accuses him of high crimes as governor-general of India.....	261
Conduct of Mr. Pitt and Mr. Dundas in this affair.....	262
Mr. Burke moves nine articles of impeachment.....	262
Mr. Hastings tenders his defence against them.....	262
Mr. Fox brings forward the Benares charge.....	262
Mr. Pitt admits its force and votes an impeachment on it.....	263
After a trial protracted to eight years, Mr. Hastings is acquitted.....	263
Mr. Burke's dying testimony against this acquittal.....	263
Remarks on the issue of this singular trial.....	264
1788 Illness of George III.....	264
Proceedings in parliament consequent thereon.....	265
A regency contemplated.....	265
Discussions on the right of the prince of Wales to the regency.....	265
Resolutions proposed by Mr. Pitt, and sanctioned by parliament.....	265
1789 Death of Mr. Cornwall, the speaker.....	265
Business of the regency resumed.....	265
Resolutions of parliament communicated to the prince.....	266
His royal highness's reply to Mr. Pitt.....	266
Intimations of the convalescence of the king.....	266
National rejoicings on his recovery.....	267
Conduct of the parliament of Ireland respecting the regency.....	267
1790 Meeting of the British parliament, January 21st.....	267
Intimation of the revolution in France.....	267
Mr. Burke's celebrated philippic against that event.....	268
Message from the king respecting Nootka sound.....	268
1791 Motion in parliament for the relief of the Catholics.....	268

Mr. Fox proposes to alter the law of libel in England.....	269
Mr. Wilberforce moves for the abolition of the slave trade.....	269
Mr. Pitt's bill for the government of Canada.....	270
Mr. Fox's objections to the measure proposed.....	270
Burke's attack upon the "Rights of Man," and the French revolution.....	270
Mr. Fox defends the revolution.....	271
Burke indignantly renounces his friendship.....	271
Fox's conduct on the occasion.....	271
Violence of party animosity in England at this time.....	271
Riots at Birmingham and other places.....	271
1792 Marriage of the duke of York with the daughter of the king of Prussia.....	272
Debates in parliament.....	272
Bill for the abolition of the slave trade passes the commons.....	272
Mr. Fox carries his bill on the law of libel.....	272
Society of the "friends of the people" alarms Mr. Pitt.....	273
Prosecution of Thomas Paine for his "Rights of Man".....	273

LETTER XXIV.

State of Affairs in France political and military—General Confederacy against France—Dumouriez's Successes in Belgium and Holland—Reverses of the Army—Struggles of the Mountainists and Girondists—Conspiracy of March 10th, 1793—Insurrection of La Vendée—Defection of Dumouriez—Fall of the Girondists—Triumph of the Mountainists—Death of the Queen, &c.
1793 Effects of the death of Louis XVI. on the parties in France.....	273
Victory of the Mountainists over the Girondists.....	274
Unfounded charges against the latter party.....	274
Dumouriez makes the conquest of Belgium.....	274
Visits Paris and returns to the army.....	274
Particulars of the campaign of Belgium.....	274
Hostilities between Dumouriez and the Jacobins.....	274
The latter send deputies into Belgium to propagate the revolution.....	274
Dumouriez discontented and resolves to change the system of government.....	274
All the powers of Europe confederate against France.....	275
The republic is menaced on all sides.....	275
Estimate of power leagued against it.....	275
The convention orders a levy of three hundred thousand men.....	275
A new tribunal appointed in Paris.....	275
Position of the hostile armies at the opening of the campaign.....	275
Project of Dumouriez impracticable and impolitic.....	275
Dumouriez advances into Holland, but is recalled by the executive.....	276
Defeat of the French army under Miranda.....	276
The Jacobins become outrageous, and denounce the Girondists.....	276
Form the resolution of murdering them on the 10th of March.....	276
The attempt anticipated and frustrated.....	276
Vergniaud denounces their committee of insurrection.....	276
He proposes an examination of the registers of the clubs, &c.....	276
Insurrection of La Vendée.....	277
The country described.....	277
Its disaffection to the revolution, and disturbed state.....	277
The levy-en-masse becomes the signal of revolt.....	277
The Vendéans become masters of several towns.....	277
Their measures of organization, &c.....	277
The convention adopts measures for counteracting the insurrection.....	278
The priests and nobles outlawed, and their properties confiscated.....	278

	Page
Dumouriez's contest with the Jacobins continues.....	278
He confers with the Austrians about marching upon Paris.....	278
The Jacobin club sends a deputation to his army.....	278
Dumouriez's singular reception of the three members.....	278
The convention summons him to its bar.....	279
He refuses compliance, and they send to arrest him.....	279
He seizes the commissaries and delivers them up to the Austrians.....	279
The convention declares him a traitor and sets a price on his head.....	279
He quits the army and passes into the Austrian camp.....	279
The committee of public safety now appointed.....	279
The duke of Orleans and all the Bourbons banished.....	279
Robespierre and Marat attack the Girondists by name.....	280
The latter attack Marat, and send him to the revolutionary tribunal.....	280
He is acquitted and carried in triumph to the assembly.....	280
Gaudet makes a proposition which confounds the Mountainists.....	280
Barère gets rid of it by proposing a commission of twelve.....	280
This commission discovers a new conspiracy.....	281
Hebert is arrested, and the clubs establish their meetings permanently.....	281
They demand the suppression of the commission of twelve.....	281
The president's speech in reply.....	281
The hall the scene of universal confusion.....	281
The motion for the suppression of the twelve is carried.....	281
An attempt is made to renew their commission, and succeeds.....	281
Terrible proceedings of the Jacobins, who prepare for extremities.....	282
Violent debates on this subject in the convention.....	282
The commission of twelve again suppressed and the mob disperses.....	283
The conspirators resolve on renewing the attack.....	283
Twenty thousand men surround the convention.....	284
Intrepid conduct of Lanjuinais.....	284
The insurgents disappointed, leave the hall and cry "to arms!".....	284
Twenty-four of the Girondist party are demanded to be given up.....	285
The convention finds all opposition unavailing.....	285
The leaders of the Girondists proscribed and put under arrest.....	285
Fall of the party, and an end put to the freedom of debate.....	285
Banishment of the Girondist leaders.....	286
Charlotte Corday assassinates Marat.....	286
Insurrection at Lyons, Marseilles, and Bourdeaux.....	286
The Lyonesse place their city in a state of defence.....	287
Marseilles raises an army of ten thousand men to march against Paris.....	287
Toulon, Nîmes, Montauban, &c. risé against the Jacobins.....	287
Various other towns follow their example.....	287
Progress of royalism in La Vendée.....	287
Every thing conspires to overthrow the convention.....	287
Wretched state of the republic at this time.....	287
Republican constitution proposed to the primary assemblies.....	288
Remarks on this new constitution.....	288
The mountain becomes acquainted with the extent of its danger.....	289
Extravagant request now presented to the assembly.....	289

Danton's motion founded on it.....	289
Barère's proposition put and decreed.....	289
Astonishing physical force now called into exercise.....	289
Vigorous efforts to subdue the insurgents.....	290
An English fleet sent to Toulon and takes possession of the town.....	290
Commissioners of the Mountain sent into the revolted capitals.....	290
Lyons besieged by general Kellermann and taken.....	290
Toulon also falls before the republicans.....	290
The convention are every where victorious.....	290
Horrible state of matters in La Vendée.....	290
The allied armies are repulsed at all points.....	291
Sanguinary proceedings of the committee of public safety.....	291
They inflict signal vengeance at Lyons, Toulon, and other places.....	292
Death of the queen, and of the Girondist deputies.....	292
Intrepid behaviour of these men.....	292
Madame Roland is condemned and suffers—her husband kills himself—Condorcet is outlawed, and has recourse to poison.....	292
Names of a few who escaped by concealment.....	292

LETTER XXV.

Dreadful State of France after the fall of the Girondists—Reign of Terror—Change of the Calendar—Impious Proceedings of the Convention—Abolition of Public Worship—Projects of Robespierre—The Monster opposed, defeated, and put to Death. A. D. 1794.
Formation of the revolutionary government.....	292
Committee of public safety by whom managed.....	293
Its first measures in relation to the calendar.....	293
Substitute the republican for the Christian calendar.....	293
Substitute the decade in the place of the week.....	293
The new era commences 22d of September.....	293
Names of their months, &c.....	293
Danton and Robespierre divide the power between them.....	293
Some account of Danton.....	293
Robespierre's jealousy of him and crafty conduct.....	293
Religion a tool in the hand of the Jacobin leaders.....	294
Gobet, bishop of Paris—the farcical part he performs.....	294
He declares his religion to be an imposture.....	294
He denies the existence of the Deity, and lays aside his episcopal decorations.....	294
Several priests follow his example.....	294
The plate of the church seized on and desecrated.....	294
The worship of God commuted for that of the goddess of Reason.....	295
Strictures on this impious and ridiculous mummery.....	295
The sanctity of marriage annulled.....	295
This folly and madness defeated its own end.....	295
Arrest of Anacharsis Clootz and others.....	296
Charges preferred against them.....	296
Nineteen of them convicted and executed.....	296
Robespierre attacks the club of the cordeliers.....	296
Danton, the Mahomet of Jacobinism is arrested.....	296
Danton and his associates are tried, condemned, and executed.....	297
Robespierre alarmed at the issue of their trial.....	298
Danton accuses him of being accessory to his death.....	298
Cecile Regnaud, a female, is guillotined on suspicion of having designs on his life.....	298
Sixty-eight others suffer at the same time on suspicion.....	298
The terrorists divided among themselves.....	299
The people get wearied of executions, and are less passive.....	299
The guillotine is removed to a more obscure site.....	299