

	Page
Alvinzi crosses the Alpon and disappoints Buonaparte	379
The latter evacuates Arcola and retreats to Ronco	379
Consequences of the first battle of Arcola	379
Manœuvres between Napoleon and Alvinzi	380
The second battle of Arcola, November the 16th	380
Alvinzi maintains his ground, and both parties draw off	380
The battle renewed on the 17th of November	380
Detail of military operations in this engagement	380
After severe fighting Alvinzi retreats to Montebello	381
Loss of the Austrians in the three battles of Arcola	381
Buonaparte's account of his own loss	381
Tardy conduct of Davidowich much to be censured	381
Wurmser makes a sally from Mantua, 23d of November	381
Termination of the fourth campaign—reflections	381
LETTER XXX.
Italian Campaign of 1797—Contest at La Favorita—Fall of Mantua—Popularity of Buonaparte—He proposes Terms to the Pope—Invades the Papal Territories—Situation of the different Italian States—Rome—Naples—Tuscany—Venice—Napoleon compels the Archduke Charles to retreat—Conduct of Venice—Armistice between France and Austria—Treaty of Leoben signed—Buonaparte declares War against Venice, &amp;c. A. D. 1797.
Results of the battle of Rivoli	382
Buonaparte proceeds to the siege of Mantua, January the 14th, 1797	382
Orders Joubert to attack the Austrians at Corona	382
The latter are defeated and take refuge in the Tyrol	382
Napoleon arrives at Roverbella, 15th of January	382
Is surprised at finding the Austrian general Provera at Mantua	382
Provera and Wurmser communicate across the lake, and concert measures of relief	382
The fortress of St. Antonia and La Favorita carried	382
Buonaparte attacks the Austrians and is every where successful	382
Wurmser capitulates for the surrender of Mantua	383
Buonaparte, in disguise, writes down the conditions	383
Their favourable tenor honourable to Buonaparte	383
Another honourable trait in his conduct	383
Conduct of the French on getting possession of Mantua	383
Elevated situation of Napoleon at this time	384
His popularity with the army	384
His description of the French soldier	384
His prudent conduct as a general commended	384
His uncorruptedness attested	385
Gradual change in his manners towards his officers	385
His conduct politic towards the Italians	385
His letter to Oriani	385
His treaty with the duke of Modena	386
He constitutes the Cispadane republic	386
The Milanese formed into the Transpadane republic	386
The pope opens a negotiation with the directory, who exact exorbitantly	387
Detail of the terms, and the pope's rejection of them	387
The directory determines on his total ruin, and Napoleon dissents	387
Negotiations renewed at Florence, but the conference breaks up	387
The pope makes common cause with the house of Austria	387
Napoleon blames the directory for breaking off the negotiation, and why	388
The pope refuses to renew negotiations, and bids defiance to the French	388
Napoleon sends Victor to invade the territories of the church	388
The papal troops prepare to oppose him	388
Flight of the latter at the approach of the French	388
Inefficacy of a popish miracle	389
The French enter Loretto—the spoil obtained there, February the 10th	389
The king of Naples menaces the French	389
Anecdote of Buonaparte and prince Pignatelli	389
March of the French troops from Ancona to Foggia	389
The pope in vain importunes his subjects to rise en masse	389
Condition of the emigrant clergy then resident in Rome	389
Buonaparte's liberal conduct towards them	390
The pope throws himself on the clemency of Napoleon	390
The latter balances consequences and spares him	390
The pope purchases a political existence	390
Terms of this extraordinary treaty	390
Amusing instance of Buonaparte's political finesse	391
His conduct towards the republic of San Marino	391
Review of the actual state of Italy	391
Buonaparte's negotiations with Venice	392
The archduke Charles takes up his position at Friuli	392
Napoleon takes the field, March, 1797, to oppose him	393
The plains on the Tagliamento favourable to the Austrian cavalry	393
The archduke and Napoleon come in contact	393
Napoleon by stratagem deceives the archduke	393
The French cross the Tagliamento unperceived	393
The Austrians repeatedly attempt to charge them, but in vain	393
The French carry the town of Gradisca, and make its garrison prisoners	394
The French defeat a division of the Austrians, and take five thousand prisoners	394
Desertions from the Austrian army	394
Buonaparte issues a proclamation, which has its effect with the Carinthians	394
He takes possession of Trieste and Fiume	394
Napoleon makes Klagenfurt his head-quarters	394
Review of his victories over the Austrians	394
The French general Joubert, unsuccessful in the Tyrol	394
He retreats and joins Napoleon	395
The Venetians violate their engagement with Napoleon, and march an army to besiege Verona	395
Napoleon determines to chastise them	396
His letter to the archduke Charles on the subject of peace	396
Answer of the archduke to his letter	396
Determination to continue hostilities	397
Buonaparte advances upon Vienna	397
Estimate of the perilous enterprise on which he enters	397
The archduke's advice to the cabinet of Vienna	397
General alarm of the citizens of Vienna on the approach of Napoleon	398
The court determines to negotiate a treaty of amity	398
Treaty of Leoben, 13th of April, 1797	398
Subsequent treaty of Campo Formio	398
Buonaparte blamed by the directory for listening to the cry of Austria	398
His reply in a despatch to the directory	398
Stipulations of the treaty of Leoben	399
Buonaparte marches to take vengeance on the Venetians	399

	Page
Junot's first interview with the senate	399
They despatch agents to Buonaparte to deprecate his wrath	399
Their curious interview	399
Is afterward informed of the massacre of Verona	399
Napoleon rejects a pecuniary compensation and declares war against Venice, May the 3d	400
Skirmish between the French and the Venetians	400
Convocation of a general council, and proposal of the doge	400
Intrusion of two strangers into the council	400
They propose certain reforms in the constitution and government	400
An insurrection takes place, and the city threatened with fire and pillage	401
A provisional government is named, and three thousand French soldiers enter the city	401
Definitive arrangements with the French	401
LETTER XXXI.
Affairs of Great Britain from the Return of Lord Malmesbury to the Peace of Amiens, 1796—1802—Suspension of Cash Payments at the Bank of England—Sir John Jervis defeats the Spanish Fleet—Landing of a Body of French Conscripts in South Wales—Mutiny in the British Navy—Insurrection in Ireland—Landing of French Troops there—Threatened Invasion of England—French Expedition to Egypt—Naval Victory of Aboukir—Siege of Acre—Union of England and Ireland—Expedition to the Coast of Holland—Unsuccessful Attempt at Ferrol—Negotiations for Peace—Attack on Copenhagen—Change in the English Ministry—Defeat of the French Army in Egypt—Peace of Amiens. A. D. 1802.
Embarrassing condition of Great Britain	402
Effects of lord Malmesbury's return	402
The king's message to parliament	402
Cash payments suspended at the bank of England	402
Parliamentary discussions founded on it	403
Mr. Pitt's bill for protecting the bank	403
1797 Junction of the French and Spanish fleets	403
Defeated by sir John Jervis, who is created earl St. Vincent	404
Nelson created a baronet for his valour	404
A French force lands in Pembroke-shire	404
Who surrender prisoners of war	404
Trinidad surrenders to the British	404
Mutiny among the British seamen	404
Delegates appointed, and petitions drawn up by them	405
The board of admiralty transferred to Portsmouth	405
The seamen obtain a redress of their grievances	405
A second mutiny breaks out, which is again quashed	405
A third mutiny at the Nore	405
The admiralty refuse compliance with their demands	406
The lords of the admiralty repair to Sheerness	406
The ringleaders executed, and subordination restored	406
Lord Duncan defeats the Dutch fleet, October the 11th, 1797	406
A day of thanksgiving appointed, and the two houses of parliament go in procession to St. Paul's	406
Disaffected state of Ireland in 1797	406
Meeting of the British parliament, November, 1797	407
State of Ireland particularly considered in it	407
Insurrection of Wexford	407
Recall of lord Candan, who is succeeded by lord Cornwallis	407
French troops landed at Killala	408
They surrender to lord Cornwallis	408
Sir John Borlase Warren intercepts a French squadron on the coast of Ireland	408
The rebellion quashed, with the loss of thirty thousand lives	408
The French directory project the invasion of England	408
Specimen of French gasconade	408
Buonaparte surveys the coast, but hesitates	408
Expedition to Egypt projected by the directory	409
Sailing of the armament from Toulon	409
Arrival of the expedition at Malta	409
Lord Nelson pursues the expedition to Egypt, where he arrives before it	409
Nelson, not finding them, returns to the Levant	409
The French fleet arrives at Alexandria, 29th of June	409
Disembarkation of the troops, and their march to Alexandria	409, 410
Buonaparte's proclamation to the Mussulmans	410
Marches his army against the Mamelukes	410
The army of Italy disappointed on viewing the country	410
Enraged conduct of the officers	410
The French annoyed by the Mamelukes and Arabs	410
Description of the Mameluke horsemen	410
Arrival of the French in the neighbourhood of the pyramids	410
The Mamelukes present themselves in full force	411
Buonaparte's address to his troops	411
The battle of the pyramids described	411
Fury of the Mameluke attack	411
The French defeat them, and drive them into the Nile	411
Buonaparte's reflections on the occasion	411
Surrender of Grand Cairo to the French	411
Who thus possess themselves of the whole of Lower Egypt	412
Arrival of lord Nelson in the bay of Aboukir	412
He finds the French fleet there, and determines on an attack	412
Particulars of the engagement	412
Death of admiral Bruyes, and destruction of his fleet	413
Results of the victory of Aboukir	413
Buonaparte proceeds to the isthmus of Suez	413
Determines on the occupation of Syria	413
Seizes the fort El-Arish	413
Buonaparte enters the Holy Land	413
He takes Gaza and Jaffa, putting three thousand Turks to the sword	413, 414
Buonaparte's cruel treatment of the prisoners at Jaffa	414
He marches to Saint Jean d'Acre	414
His letters to Djezzar Pacha, the governor	414
Who applies for assistance to sir Sidney Smith	414
Intrepid conduct of this officer	414
Capture of a French convoy from Damietta	414
Preparations for defending Acre	414
Buonaparte commences the siege, 17th of March	414
The French commence the assault, March the 28th	415
They are repulsed by the Turks, who destroy their works	415
The French army is surrounded by the Moslems	415
Kleber is sent to disperse the latter	415
Buonaparte forced to hasten to his assistance	415
The French receive thirty pieces of cannon from Jaffa	415
Buonaparte's address to Murat	415
His repeated and desperate assaults on Acre	415
Arrival of a reinforcement of Turkish troops	415
Djezzar allows the French to enter the place	416
Desperate conduct of the Turks at this instant	416
The French general Rambaud killed and Lannes wounded	416
Final effort of the French, 21st of May, 1799	416
The siege finally abandoned	416
Buonaparte's remarks on his failure	417
Retreat of the French to Jaffa	417
Report of his proposal to administer opium to the sick	417
Buonaparte returns to Cairo	417

PART IV.

FROM THE TREATY OF AMIENS, IN 1802, TO THE DEATH OF ALEXANDER I THE RUSSIAN EMPEROR, IN 1825.

LETTER I.

Sketch of the Politics of Europe, from the general Pacification in 1802, to the Renewal of Hostilities, June, 1803—Napoleon created Consul for ten Years—afterward for Life—Expedition to St. Domingo—its total Failure, and melancholy Results—Reflections on that Event—Renewal of War with France.

Table listing various events and their corresponding page numbers, such as 'Aggrandizement of France resulting from the late war' (458) and 'The English newspapers a source of grievance to Napoleon' (468).

Table listing various events and their corresponding page numbers, such as 'The English newspapers a source of grievance to Napoleon' (468) and 'War declared on the following day' (472).

LETTER II.

History of Europe from the Commencement of Hostilities—Change of Ministry in England, and Mr. Pitt's Return to Power—Insurrection in Ireland—Affairs of France—Conspiracy to assassinate the First Consul—Arrest of the Duke d'Enghien—Napoleon assumes the Imperial Dignity, and is crowned by the Pope—War between Great Britain and Spain. A. D. 1803, 1804.

Table listing various events and their corresponding page numbers, such as 'England prepares for war' (472) and 'Napoleon now emperor of France, makes an overture of peace to George III.' (485).

Table listing various events and their corresponding page numbers, such as 'The empire proclaimed at St. Cloud, 18th of May, 1804' (479) and 'Complete failure of the catamarans' (484).

LETTER III.

Continuation of the History of Europe, from the Commencement of the War with Spain to the Battle of Trafalgar, 1805—Liberal Supplies granted to Mr. Pitt—Impeachment of Lord Melville—Change of the continental Republics into Kingdoms—Napoleon made King of Italy—Third Coalition formed against France—Battle of Austerlitz and Capture of Vienna—Peace of Presburg—Naval Victory of Trafalgar—Death of Lord Nelson, and Honours paid to his Memory—Death and Character of Mr. Pitt.

Table listing various events and their corresponding page numbers, such as 'Napoleon now emperor of France, makes an overture of peace to George III.' (485) and 'Review of the state of Europe at the close of 1805' (496).

Table listing various events and their corresponding page numbers, such as 'Prepares to attack the fortress of Ulm, which surrenders' (488) and 'Review of the state of Europe at the close of 1805' (496).

LETTER IV.

History of the Affairs of Europe during the Year 1806—Consolidation of the Power of Napoleon—Administration of Mr. Fox and Lord Grenville—Progress of the War—Abolition of the Slave Trade—Expedition to South America—Naples erected into a Kingdom under Joseph Buonaparte—Battle of Maida—New Constitution formed for Holland, and Louis Buonaparte created King—Negotiations for Peace—Death and Character of Mr. Fox—Rupture between France and Prussia—Battles of Saalfeld, Jena, and Auerstadt—Capture of Berlin—Conquest of Silesia—Berlin Decrees—Renewal of War between Russia and France—Battles of Pultusk and Eylau—Capture of Dantzic, Friedland, and Konigsberg—Peace of Tilsit, July 7th, 1807.

Table listing various events and their corresponding page numbers, such as 'Review of the state of Europe at the close of 1805' (496) and 'The republican calendar of France exchanged for the common one, 1st of January, 1806' (496).

Battles of Eckmühl and Esling—Vienna a second Time occupied by the French—Battle of Wagram Peace again concluded at Vienna, 14th of October, 1809.

	Page
Russia continues faithful to the treaty of Tilsit	534
Meeting of Napoleon and Alexander at Erfurth, 27th of September, 1808	534
The emperors resolve on making Sweden exclude all British ships from its harbours	534
His Swedish majesty refuses compliance, and prepares to resist	535
He applies to England for assistance	535
A liberal subsidy is granted, and an army of ten thousand men	535
Sir John Moore arrives at Gottenburg, May the 17th, 1808	535
He declines to land, and brings his troops back	535
The Russians take possession of Abo	535
And make descents on the islands of Gothland and Aland	535
Armistice concluded in Finland, 27th of September	536
The king of Sweden is placed under arrest, and committed prisoner to Drotningholm	536
A diet assembled, May, 1809, and the king's abdication produced	536
A new constitution framed—peace made with Russia	536
The late king is liberated, and retires to Switzerland	536
France and Sweden accommodate their differences	536
Results of the peace of Tilsit on the continental states	536
Review of the empire of France	536
Napoleon seizes the forts of Kehl, Wesel, Cassel, &c. &c.	537
His decree of May, 1808	537
The pope protests against his conduct	537
This followed by an act of excommunication	537
Napoleon has him arrested, and conveyed prisoner to Avignon	537
Murat made king of Naples as Joachim I.	537
The Austrians prepare for war with France	538
Napoleon arrives at Ingolstadt, to commence the campaign, April the 18th, 1809	538
The archduke Charles takes possession of Ratisbon	538
Battle of Eckmühl, April the 22d	538
The Austrians defeated with great slaughter, and Ratisbon taken	538
Napoleon advances towards Vienna, and issues a proclamation	538
The archduke collects his scattered forces, and proceeds to Vienna	538
Battle of Esling, May the 21st, a long and severe contest	538
Death of marshal Lannes (duke of Montebello)	538
Perilous situation of Napoleon	539
The Tyrolese are roused to action under Hoffer	539
Military manœuvres in the north of Germany	539
Colonel Shill and the duke of Brunswick exert themselves	539
The archduke Ferdinand rouses the Poles	539
The archduke John in Italy takes Padua and Vicenza	539
The French army cooped up in an island of the Danube	539
A bridge is thrown over the river, and they make their escape, July the 4th	539
Battle of Wagram, July the 6th	539
The French compelled to retreat	539
The battle renewed—manœuvres of the armies	540
Error of the Austrians in extending their line too far	540
Napoleon takes advantage of it and defeats them	540
Retreat of the Austrians to Moravia	540
Peace concluded between Austria and France	540

LETTER VIII.

Review of the Affairs of England, 1809, 1810—Treaty of Alliance between Great Britain and

Spain—Parliamentary Proceedings—Charges against the Duke of York—Expedition to Walcheren—Dissensions in the British Cabinet—Violent Agitations of Party—Brilliant Exploits of the British Navy—Dispute with the United States.

	Page
Meeting of the British parliament, 19th of January, 1809	541
Debates on the affairs of Portugal and Spain	541
Colonel Wardle's charges against the duke of York	542
Mr. Perceval's ill-advised plan for disposing of them	542
The royal duke's letter to the speaker	542
Termination of the investigation	542
His royal highness retires from the office of generalissimo	543
Lord Castlereagh accused of trafficking for a seat in parliament	543
Parliamentary proceedings thereon	543
Mr. Curwen's bill, and the speaker's declaration	543
Extent of the British naval power at this crisis	543
Remarks on the narrowness of her plan of operations	544
Preparation for an expedition to Walcheren, May, 1809	544
The armament sets sail July the 23th	544
Fishing invested, 13th of August	544
Surrender of the place, and five thousand prisoners	544
The French garrison Antwerp	545
Sickly state of the British troops in Walcheren	545
Lord Chatham returns to England, 14th of September	545
Buonaparte's exultation at the plight of the English army	545
The troops return 23d of December—reflections on the issue	545
Duel between Castlereagh and Canning	545
The latter secedes from administration	545
The duke of Portland resigns, and lord Castlereagh	545, 546
Mr. Perceval attempts to bring in lords Grey and Grenville	546
Correspondence of those noblemen, and reasons for declining office	546
Ministerial arrangements	546
Celebration of the fiftieth year of the king's reign	546
The island of Martinique is captured by the British	546
Lord Cochrane's gallant exploit near Rochelle	546
Lord Collingwood captures the isle of Zante	547
Rear-admiral Martin destroys a French convoy off the Rhone	547
Dispute with the United States of America	547

LETTER IX.

Retrospective View of the State of Parties in Spain—Joseph Buonaparte returns to Madrid—Second Campaign in Spain and Portugal. A. D. 1809.

State of Spain when Napoleon invaded it	548
Bad policy of the latter instanced	548
Godoy, prince of Peace, and Ferdinand at issue	548
Treaty of Fontainebleau for the dismemberment of Portugal	548
The Spaniards resist the terms of this treaty	549
Napoleon's proclamation to the Spanish people	549
The clergy of Spain are roused by it	549
Division of the Spanish population into two classes	550
Curious catechism for the use of the Spanish youth	550
Hostile spirit towards Napoleon	550
Military operations—siege of Saragossa, January the 7th, 1809	550
The place is taken 17th of February—destructive issue	551
Rapid succession of disasters in Catalonia	551

	Page
General Beresford takes command of the Portuguese army	551
Arrival of sir A. Wellesley at Lisbon, with British troops	551
Soult evacuates Oporto, and retreats into Galicia	551
Wellesley joins Cuesta at Oropesa, July the 20th	551
Preparations for the battle of Talavera	551
The French defeated with the loss of ten thousand men	551
Sir Arthur Wellesley created lord Wellington	552
The French advance in force, and Wellington retires behind the Tagus	552
Marquis Wellesley visits the supreme junta at Cadiz	552
Difference between Cuesta and lord Wellington	552
Sir Robert Wilson pushes forward towards Madrid	552
Exertions of the Spanish generals to reorganize their armies	552
Complaints against the conduct of the junta	552
Proclamation of the junta, October, 1809	553
They propose the convocation of a representative assembly	553
The inhabitants of Gerona defend the castle of Monjuich	553
General Blake exerts himself to relieve the place	553
Intrepid conduct of the governor, Don Alvarez	554
Gerona surrenders to the French, December the 10th	554
Venagas superseded in command by the marquis Arizaga	554
The latter defeated by the French with great loss	554
Unfavourable termination of the second campaign	554

LETTER X.

Domestic Affairs of France—Napoleon repudiates his Wife Josephine, and marries the Daughter of the Emperor of Austria—Consequence of this Marriage on his Politics—He deposes his Brother Louis, and annexes Holland to France—Also Piedmont and the Hanse Towns—Hanover annexed to Westphalia—Bernadotte ascends the Throne of Sweden—Political Affairs of the North of Europe. A. D. 1810.

Napoleon's address to the legislative body, December the 3d, 1809	554
Reflections on his power and popularity at this moment	555
Josephine bears him no issue, and he projects a divorce	555
Various projects for providing an heir to the throne	555
Fouché intimates to Josephine what is in contemplation	556
Napoleon disavows the communication of Fouché	556
His first views directed to the sister of the emperor Alexander	556
She declines the offer, and his attention is turned to the house of Austria	556
His offer is accepted, and he gives intimation of his intentions	556, 557
State of Josephine on its announcement	557
Preparations for the separation	557
The divorce carried into effect	558
Arrangements respecting Josephine	558
The marriage of Napoleon with Maria Louisa, 11th of March, 1810	558
Amiable character of the latter	558
She bears him a son, 11th of March, 1811	559
Review of Napoleon's situation	559
He is dissatisfied with the conduct of his brother Louis	559
Takes means to displace him from the throne of Holland	559
Holland annexed to France—also Piedmont—and the Hanse Towns	559

	Page
Bernadotte raised to the throne of Sweden, August, 1810	560
The new king's address to his subjects	560
Sweden declares war against Great Britain	560
The latter takes possession of Anhalt	560

LETTER XI.

Affairs of Great Britain, A. D. 1810—Parliamentary Inquiry into the Expedition to the Scheldt—Sir Francis Burdett sent to the Tower—Riots in the Metropolis—Naval Expeditions and Successes—Derangement of the King, and Appointment of a Regency. A. D. 1810, 1811.

Meeting of the British parliament, 23d of January, 1810	560
Points touched upon in the king's speech	560
Inquiry into the failure of the expedition to Walcheren	560
Motion for papers respecting that ill-fated expedition	561
Earl of Chatham's statement presented to the king	561
The noble earl resigns his office as master-general of the ordnance	561
Proceedings relative to the Walcheren expedition	561
Mr. Windham's attack on the newspaper reporters	561
Debate at the British forum	561
John Gale Jones committed to Newgate	562
Sir Francis Burdett's letter in Cobbett's Weekly Register	562
Discussions founded on it in the commons	562
A motion is made for committing the baronet to the tower	562
The sergeant-at-arms sent to take him into custody	562
Sir Francis disputes the legality of the warrant	562
The law-officers consulted, who declare for its legality	562
The honourable baronet resists, and is taken by force to the tower	563
The military insulted by a mob, on whom they fire	563
Sir Francis addresses a letter to the speaker, protesting against his commitment	563
Liberation of sir Francis, who brings his action against the speaker, but fails in it	563
The electors of Westminster and freeholders of Middlesex present petitions	563
The isles of Bourbon and France taken by the British	563
Capture of several French frigates in the Indian seas	564
The Dutch settlement of Amboyna taken by the English	564
Death of the king's daughter, the princess Amelia, November the 2d, 1810	564
Illness of the king, and consequent derangement	564
Appointment of a regency	564

LETTER XII.

Progress of the War in the Peninsula—Third Campaign, 1810—The French reduce Ciudad Rodrigo and Almeida, but are repulsed at Buzaco—Admirable Conduct of Lord Wellington—The French severely harassed in Spain—They capture Seville, but fail in the Siege of Cadiz—Proceedings in Catalonia and Valencia—Meeting of the Cortes—Schemes of Reform—Attempted Invasion of Sicily by Murat. A. D. 1810, 1811.

1809 Hopeless cause of Spanish independence	565
Advance of the French army, January, 1810	565
General Sebastiani takes Ocaña and Malaga	565
Manifesto of king Joseph, 29th of January	565
Marshal Victor enters Seville, February the 10th	565
Questionable conduct of the junta	566
The duke of Albuquerque marches to Cadiz	566
British troops received into the isle of Leon	566
Resignation of the supreme junta	566
Soult summons Cadiz to surrender, 10th of February	566

	Page
Where he continues two months deliberating . . .	417
A formidable force is mustered against the French . . .	417
Buonaparte's oracular address to Murat . . .	418
The Mamelukes commence an attack on the French . . .	418
The latter repulse them with great slaughter . . .	418
Napoleon obtains a splendid victory, and prepares to quit Egypt . . .	418
State of affairs in France . . .	419
He commits the army to Kleber and Menou, and embarks for Europe . . .	419
Lands at Frejus, with his staff, October the 9th . . .	419
Union of England and Ireland, January, 1799 . . .	419
British expedition to the coast of Holland . . .	420
The Dutch fleet surrenders to admiral Mitchell . . .	420
The duke of York returns to Holland, 13th of September . . .	420
Takes possession of Alkmaar . . .	420
Suspension of hostilities agreed on . . .	420
The British agree to evacuate Holland . . .	420
Expedition under sir James Pulteney attempts Ferrol, but fails . . .	421
General wish for peace . . .	421
Discussions between M. Otto and lord Grenville . . .	421
Embargo laid on all foreign ships in the British ports . . .	421
Which is retorted by Denmark and Sweden . . .	421
Prussia lays an embargo, and her troops seize Hanover . . .	421
Danish troops take possession of Hamburg . . .	421
The British fleet attack Copenhagen . . .	422
A dreadful battle ensues . . .	422
Death of the emperor Paul of Russia . . .	422
He is succeeded by Alexander . . .	422
Mr. Pitt gives in his resignation . . .	422
New arrangements in the cabinet . . .	422
Reasons assigned by lord Grenville for resigning . . .	423
British expedition to Egypt under sir R. Abercrombie . . .	423
It arrives at Alexandria, March the 1st, 1801 . . .	423
The British troops defeat the French in their first encounter . . .	423
Battle of Alexandria, 21st of March . . .	423
Victory decided for the English, who take the invincible standard . . .	424
Sir Ralph Abercrombie receives a mortal wound and dies . . .	424
General Hutchinson succeeds to the command . . .	424
He proceeds against Alexandria and Cairo . . .	424
The French agree to surrender the latter place . . .	425
Arrival of general Baird from India in the Red Sea . . .	425
The French surrender Alexandria, and agree to evacuate Egypt . . .	425
Admiral sir James Saumarez engages a combined squadron on the coast of Spain . . .	426
Nelson attacks the French flotilla at Boulogne . . .	426
Threatened invasion of England . . .	426
France attempts to detach Portugal from England . . .	426
Spain marches an army into Portugal . . .	427
England assists her ally . . .	427
Negotiations for peace continued, and preliminaries signed . . .	427
Reflections on the war . . .	427
LETTER XXXII.
Continuation of the internal Affairs of France, from the Insurrection of the Sections, 1793, to the End of the Directorial Government in 1800—Jacobical Conspiracy frustrated—Elections of May, 1797—Royalist Attempt at Conspiracy and Exile of many Members of the Councils—Return of Buonaparte to Paris, May, 1798—Reflections on his Egyptian Expedition—Conduct of the Directory and Proceedings of the Councils—Turbulent State of Affairs—Plans of Napoleon for quashing them—He obtains the Office of Consul and dissolves the Legislative Body. A. D. 1800.
The English, American, and French revolutions compared . . .	428
Paramount influence of the French revolution . . .	428
Advantages attending the appointment of a directory . . .	428
State of the country at the time it commenced . . .	429
Reflections on the defection of Pichegru . . .	429
Carnot's plan of the campaign of 1796 . . .	429
The directory attacked by the democrats and royalists . . .	430
Babeuf becomes leader of the democratic faction . . .	430
The directory prevent the meetings at the pantheon . . .	430
The directory defeat a conspiracy against them . . .	430
The democrats resolve on overturning the convention . . .	430
Their plot is discovered, and Babeuf arrested . . .	430
Babeuf and Darthé tried, and sentenced to death, but kill themselves . . .	430, 431
Insurrection against the directory frustrated . . .	431
Contest between the sections and the directory . . .	431
The directory call in the aid of the military . . .	431
Destruction of the democratic party . . .	431
The elections of 1797 favourable to the royalist party . . .	431
Assembly of the councils, Pichegru president . . .	431
Projected attack on the directory . . .	431
An intermediate party arranged under Carnot . . .	432
The army under Augereau interposes between the parties . . .	432
Arrest of Pichegru and the royalist leaders . . .	433
The councils are summoned—address from the directory . . .	433
Banishment of the royalist leaders to Cayenne . . .	433
Consequences of this measure . . .	434
Return of Napoleon from Egypt, and honours shown him . . .	434
Conduct of the rulers of France towards Switzerland . . .	434
The papal territories formed into a republic . . .	435
Elections of May, 1798, unfavourable to the directory . . .	435
Character of the directory at this period . . .	435
Second coalition of the continental powers . . .	435
The armies of Russia and Austria muster in Germany . . .	435
Commencement of hostilities in Italy and on the Rhine . . .	435
Military conscription in France . . .	435
Plan of the coalesced powers . . .	435
The duke of York again lands an army in Holland . . .	435
Elections of May, 1799, favour the republican party . . .	436
The directory and the councils at variance . . .	436
The directory resign, and are succeeded by others . . .	437
Abbé Siéyes projects a new constitution . . .	437
And relies on the army for enforcing it . . .	438
Intriguing of parties at this time . . .	438
The royalists once more lift up their heads . . .	438
The allied armies receive a check in various quarters . . .	438
Defeat of the British in Holland, and return home of the army . . .	438
Prevailing dissensions in the French government . . .	439
The return of Buonaparte from Egypt brings matters to an issue . . .	439
Interview between Siéyes and Buonaparte . . .	440
Adoption of a plan for making the latter first consul . . .	440
Preparations for carrying it into effect . . .	440
The directory are panic-struck, and resign . . .	441
Buonaparte places himself at the head of the troops, and marches them to the Tuileries . . .	441
Decree of the council of ancients, and Napoleon's proclamations . . .	441
Language of the latter on seizing the dictatorship . . .	441
Assembling of the council at St. Cloud, 9th of November . . .	441
The army surrounds the two council-chambers . . .	441
The members renew the oath to the constitution of the year three . . .	441

	Page
Buonaparte presents himself among them, and addresses them . . .	442
They call upon him to take the oath which he declines . . .	442
He repairs to the council of five hundred . . .	442
The scene of confusion occasioned by it . . .	443
Conduct of Lucien Buonaparte on the occasion . . .	443
Napoleon retires from the hall, and appeals to his soldiers . . .	443
The latter pledge themselves to support him . . .	443
He gives orders to his officers to clear the hall of five hundred . . .	443
The members oppose the military, but are compelled to retire . . .	444
A military government established in France, November the 9th, 1799 . . .	444
LETTER XXXIII.
State of France consequent on the Appointment of Napoleon to the Consulship—A provisional Government nominated—The Constitution of the Abbé Siéyes changed in the Constitution of the year eight—Formation of the Government—Pacific Professions of Napoleon—Campaign of Italy and celebrated Battle of Marengo—Peace of the Continent by the Treaty of Lunéville, and with England by the Treaty of Amiens. A. D. 1799—1802.
Speculations on the result of the recent change in the French government . . .	444
Formation of the consular government . . .	444
Its constituent parts and appalling principles unravelled . . .	445
Leading ministers now appointed . . .	445
Napoleon offers peace to the king of England . . .	445
Substance of lord Grenville's reply to his letter . . .	445
Napoleon's address to the French nation . . .	445
His preparations for the campaign, and plan for prosecuting it . . .	446
Secretly transports his army across the Alps . . .	446
He leaves Paris, May the 6th, 1800, and arrives at Geneva on the 8th . . .	447
He joins the van of his army at Lausanne, May the 13th . . .	447
Report of Carnot, the minister of war . . .	447
Berthier is nominally constituted commander-in-chief . . .	447
Force of the army of Italy at this period . . .	447
Their plan of crossing the Alps and difficulties surmounted . . .	447
Napoleon's own march described . . .	448
The army arrives at the convent of St. Bernard . . .	448
Descent of the troops beyond Mont St. Bernard . . .	448
Commencement of military operations between the French and Austrians . . .	448
The French have to attack the fortress of Bard . . .	448
Buonaparte evades the rock of Albaredo, and escapes the garrison of Bard . . .	449
Fort Bard afterward reduced by the French troops . . .	449
The French army advance down the valley of Ivrea . . .	449
Plan of the Austrians for opposing the progress of the French . . .	450
Operations of the Austrian general Melas . . .	450
The English fleet co-operate with him at Genoa . . .	450
Skirmish between Melas and Massena at Genoa . . .	450
Details of the siege of Genoa . . .	450
General Melas enters Nice and prepares to pass the Var . . .	450
Melas receives information that Napoleon had crossed the Alps, and was threatening Piedmont and the Milanese . . .	450
He determines to march against Buonaparte, and orders general Ott to raise the siege of Genoa . . .	451
Buonaparte deceives Melas, and marches direct for Milan . . .	452
Skilful manœuvring of the French army . . .	452
Napoleon enters Milan, June the 2d, and reorganizes the Cisalpine government . . .	452
He issues a proclamation to his troops . . .	452
Description of general Melas as an officer . . .	452
His critical situation at this period . . .	452
He moves his troops towards Alexandria . . .	453
Battle of Montebello . . .	453
Contest between generals Lannes and Ott—defeat of the Austrians . . .	453
Approaching battle of Marengo . . .	453
General Dessaix arrives from Egypt, and joins Buonaparte . . .	453
The first consul draws his troops towards the plain of Marengo . . .	454
He is disappointed by the movements of Melas . . .	454
Napoleon orders Dessaix to march towards Rivolta . . .	454
Melas holds a council of war, and resolves to fight Napoleon . . .	454
Dispositions for the battle of Marengo . . .	454
Comparative estimate of their forces . . .	454
Important issue at stake . . .	455
The Austrians cross the Bormida, and proceed to the attack . . .	455
Particulars of the battle of Marengo . . .	455
Progress of this severely contested battle . . .	455
Melas, exhausted, retires from the field . . .	456
The issue in favour of the Austrians . . .	456
Dessaix's observation to Napoleon who was retreating . . .	456
General Zach succeeds Melas in the Austrian command . . .	456
Death of general Dessaix, by a musket-ball . . .	456
Buonaparte's address to his troops . . .	456
An imprudent step of the Austrians loses them the day . . .	456
The success of the French owing to the arrival of Dessaix . . .	456
Melas enters into a convention with Buonaparte, June 15th, 1800 . . .	457
Return of Buonaparte to Milan, and his proceedings there . . .	457
Buonaparte constitutes Massena commander-in-chief in Italy, and returns to Paris . . .	457
Review of his movements from May the 6th to July the 2d . . .	457
His reception at Paris . . .	457
Peace between Austria and France ratified by the treaty of Lunéville . . .	457
Treaties of peace now signed with Naples—Portugal—Russia—the Ottoman Porte—and finally with England . . .	457, 458