

I have pretty well ascertained not so useful as the green vegetable ointment: the last I have some reason to believe to have been pernicious.

The utility of the scrophularia ointment does not stand on my testimony alone. I have annually mentioned, at lecture, the state of my observations on this disease, and I have received favourable accounts of the use of it from several friends; some engaged in the profession, and some not.

I do not pretend to have proved, that the scrophularia has a specific effect on this disease; possibly it is only useful, by supplying the green vegetable matter; but as I and some of my friends have had a success more uniform, by means of this ointment, in a disease in which our failure was almost uniform before, I shall continue to prefer it to other vegetable matters until the subject is better understood.

In addition to this clear and satisfactory account extracted from Dr. Stokes's publication, I will observe from some circumstances within my own experience, that the cure is facilitated by keeping the bowels free from solids with moderate doses of purgatives, of which calomel forms a part.

APPENDIX.

APPENDIX,

Containing the Medicines recommended for the several Diseases treated of in this work, together with their Doses and method of preparation. The numbers in the first column shew the Latin prescriptions; their corresponding numbers in the second column, the same prescriptions translated into English.

No. 1. R. Calomelanos grana sex.

Scammoni grana sex.

Pulveris capsici granum: probe in mortareo contritis, adde conserv: rosar: q: s: ut fiat pilula: tres.

No. 2. R. Calomelanos grana quatuor.

Pulv: radiciis jalapae grana quatuor.

Pulv: capsici granum: probe in mortareo contritis, adde conserv: rosar: q: s: ut fiat bolus.

No. 1. Take six grains of calomel, six grains of scammony, and one grain of Cayenne pepper; let the whole be well triturated in a mortar, and then made into three pills with conserve of roses.

No. 2. Let four grains of calomel, four grains of powdered jalap, and one grain of Cayenne pepper, be well triturated together in a mortar, and then made into a bolus with conserve of roses.

No. 3. R. Calomelanos grana sex.
Alves hepaticæ grana sex.

Pulver: capsulæ granum: probe in mortario contritis addæ, gelatin: sup: q: s: ut fiat pilulæ tres.

No. 3. Let six grains of calomel, six grains of hepatic aloë, and one grain of Cayenne pepper, be well triturated together in a mortar, and then made into three pills, by means of jelly of soap.

Of these three prescriptions (the quantity being given) the first is the mildest, and the last the most active purgative. Two of the pills, No. 1 and 3, and the bolus No. 2, are a medium dose for grown men, and for the ordinary constitutions of females in the humble ranks of life; but for delicate females in low life; and for most females in the higher ranks, one of the pills, No. 1 or 3, will often be a sufficient dose; and in all cases amongst such patients, the most cautious and secure method will be, to give but one of these pills for a dose, and, if necessary, to exhibit some other purgative in a liquid form a few hours afterwards, according to the directions given, in treating of the cure of the preceding diseases. We sometimes meet with robust men, in habits of active exercise, in different ranks of society, and even strong females of laborious occupations, who will require larger doses than what I have mentioned; and often some for whom the three pills of the prescriptions, No. 1 or 3, will not be too large a dose; but those occurrences (which should be considered peculiarities) can only be known from experience; it will be prudent therefore, to begin with a moderate dose, except where those peculiarities are ascertained, from a previous acquaintance with the constitution of the patient.

APPENDIX.

No. 4. R. Infusi tamarind: cum semina uncias

No. 4. In five ounces of infusion of tamarinds and senna, dissolve six drachms of pure sulphat of magnesia, and then add one ounce of tincture of senna, one drachm of electuary of scammony, two drachms of syrup of orange peel, mix all together. Let two table spoonfuls of this mixture be taken at a time, and repeated every two hours until the bowels are opened.

No. 5. R. Pulver: subtilissimi crystal: tartari

Pulv: rad: jalapæ drachman.

Pulv: aromatiæi grana duodecim:

probe in mortario, contritis addæ electuarii sennæ semunciam.

Syrup: cort: aurant: q: s: ut terendo fiat electuarium.

APPENDIX.

No. 5. Take an ounce and half of finely powdered crystals of tartar, one drachm of well powdered jalap, and twelve grains of aromatic powder. Triturate the whole carefully in a mortar, and then add to it half an ounce of electuary of senna, and as much syrup of orange peel as shall give the whole, the consistence of an electuary, by still continuing the trituration.

The electuary No. 5, is a safe and active purgative; it commonly operates as a diuretic also; for these reasons it is very useful in dropsical complaints; and in great constipation of the bowels it is a good remedy to procure evacuations after other aperients have failed. The quantity of the jalap may be diminished when diuretic effects principally are looked for; and where the case requires a powerful cathartic, the jalap may be increased. The dose is about a tea-spoonful taken every two or three hours until it operates.

No. 6. R. Decocti pro enemate uncias duodecim.

No. 8. Take half a drachm of hepatic aloes, and one scruple of Spanish soap; pound them well together in a mortar: then add six drops of essential oil of caraway, and as much conserve of roses as shall make the whole into twelve pills. Let two or three of these be taken occasionally.

No. 9. Take sixteen grains of calomel, sixteen grains of dried carbonate of soda, and eight grains of powdered ginger. Let the whole be well pounded together in a mortar, and then made into sixteen pills with mucilage of gum arabic. Two are to be taken at bed time and repeated every night or every other night according to circumstances.

No. 10. Let one ounce and half of finely powdered crystals of tartar, half a drachm of Scammony, one drachm and half of jalap, and one scruple of aromatic powder be well pounded together in a mortar, and then by trituration made into an electuary with a sufficient quantity of syrup of orange peel.

No. 56. To six ounces of pennyroyal water add two drachms of tincture of myrrh, and of diluted sulphuric acid a sufficient quantity to form the whole into a sour gargle.

Where foul ulcers or abscesses are seated far back in the mouth or throat, especially in young patients, it will be often impossible to convey the gargle with safety to the diseased part, except by means of a pencil, or some similar instrument. In such cases therefore, our best method will be to dip a fine pencil, or a bit of soft linen tied round a quill or handle of a teaspoon, &c. in the gargle, and with this to touch the abscess, as freely and as frequently as may be deemed proper. In those instances too, the stimulating ingredient of the gargles, such as the tincture and acids, might be increased; and always the more foul and gangrenous the ulcers appear, the stronger and more stimulating should the gargle be made. A mineral acid, e. g. the marine acid mixed up with honey of roses, will form a good gargle in such instances. Cayenne pepper also makes an excellent gargle in these dangerous cases; it may be used in infusion, or tincture diluted with water, or in fine powder mixed with honey of roses, &c.
